PREFACE.

It is with sincere regret that I have, with the close of this volume, to announce my retirement from the post of Editor of THE GENEALOGIST, which I have had the honour to hold for the past five years. Within the last few months it has become evident that the time at my disposal was barely sufficient for the requirements of the magazine, and I therefore relinquish, much against my inclination, a position which it has been a very great pleasure to occupy even for so short a period. With feelings difficult to express, I have again and for the last time, to thank all those who have so generously and materially helped in the endeavour to print really useful and valuable information which might prove of service both to present and future genealogists.

In the selection of my successor and friend, Mr. H. W. Forsyth Harwood, the proprietors are to be congratulated on having secured the services of one so thoroughly capable of advancing the status and of upholding the high traditions of this well-known quarterly.

The Genealogist.

THE ANCIENT EARLS OF LEICESTER.

By G. W. WATSON.

In this sketch of the genealogy of the Earls of Leicester of the family of Beaumont, I give extracts from, or at the least, references to, the original authorities from whom it has been compiled. An appendix contains certain charters, many of which have already been briefly referred to in the notes to the article on the Earls of Leicester in the "Complete Peerage" by G. E. C. To that article indeed the following should, in great measure, be considered as supplementary.

I. Robert, Count of Meulan in the Vexin Français, Sire de Beaumont, Pont-Audemer, Brioune, and other lands in Normandy, is generally considered to have been also Earl of Leicester. Orderic, in a well-known passage, relates how the Count, with the King's help and by his own craft, acquired the whole town of Leicester, et inde consul in Anglia factus, omnes regni proceres divitiis et potestate præcessit. And again, Robertus comitatum de Mellento in pago Vilcasino . . . possedit, et in Anglia comitatum Legecestrie. The cartulary of St. Mary at Leicester states that, previous to 1107, Robertus comes Mellenti, consulatum Leicestrie adeptus, rebuilt that collegiate church. There seems to be no doubt, therefore, that he possessed the comitatus, which must be held to have comprehended the dignity of earl. Yet it is equally certain that he never styled himself Earl of Leicester.¹ It is not, however, to be expected that the Count of Meulan, already a comes, would either have dropped his illustrious name to assume the title of Earl of Leicester, or else would have used both titles together;² either course would have been without a parallel, and, indeed, without a purpose; for at the commencement of the twelfth century the territorial designation was held of little account. Hence it is not surprising that we find him styled Count of Meulan only, both in charters and in chronicles.

He married firstly, according to Orderic, Godechilde, dau. of

There is an inspeximus by King Edward which would settle the matter if it could be relied on. The charter as there quoted runs:—Universis . . . Robertus comes de Mellento et Leicestrie . . . dedi et concessi . . . Deo et ecclesie sanctorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli de Pratellis . . . manerium de Thothes . . . But to me such evidence seems valueless. I remark that Henry II. confirming the said gift says, Ex dono Roberti comitis Mellenti ecclesiam . . . , et manerium de Thothes, making no mention of Leicester.

Ralph II.,³ Seigneur de Toeny and de Conches. From her he must have been separated by 1096, for in that year she was married, as first wife, to Baldwin of Boulogne, afterwards King of Jerusalem, accompanied her husband on the crusade, and died at Maresia (Marash) before reaching Antioch, in 1097. Her second marriage is attested by Albert of Aix and William of Tyre as well as by Orderic, but the latter is the sole authority for her marriage with Count Robert. Many writers, indeed, disbelieve his statement altogether, seeing that the continuator of William of Jumièges says that Godechilde, dau. of this Ralph de Toeny, married Robert de Neufbourg, younger son of Henry Earl of Warwick, and nephew of Count Robert.⁴ But the absurdity of attributing to Robert de Neufbourg a wife from whom he must have been separated by 1096 is sufficiently apparent. For that eminent baron, who was afterwards seneschal of Normandy, did not die till 30 Aug. 1159, according to two chronicles of Bec;⁵ and his mother Margaret (du Perche) was actually living in 1156. Whether the statement by Orderic is correct or not, it is probable that Count Robert had some wife before his undoubted marriage in 1096, as he was near fifty at least by then.⁶ This first marriage, if such there were, whether with Godechilde de Toeny or with another, will no doubt have been childless, though the authors of L'Art de Vérifier les Dates think that there may have been a son, viz. Robert de Meulan, who was a monk of St. Martin at Pontoise.⁷

In 1096 Count Robert sought in marriage Elizabeth or Isabel, dau. of Hugh le Grand, younger son of Henry I., King of the French, and Count of Vermandois and Valois in right of his wife Adelaide, dau. of Herbert IV., Count of Vermandois and Valois. There were difficulties in the way, for the parties were too nearly allied. Ivo of Chartres forbade the marriage.⁸ A dispensation was, however, obtained from the Pope, on condition that Count Hugh should join the first crusade; and the marriage was accordingly celebrated just before that Count's departure, which took place in April 1096. After bringing her husband three sons and five daughters, the Countess Isabel eloped with William de Warrenne, Earl of Surrey, as is known by the testimony of many writers. The Count of Meulan died 5 June 1118,⁹ and was buried in

⁶ He was a novice in arms, tiro, as William of Poitou expresses it, at the battle of Hastings. Orderic copies the word.

⁷ I question whether this individual was not rather of the family of Mello in the Beauvaisis; they had much to do with the Church of St. Martin.

⁸ See Appendix, no. i.

the chapterhouse of St. Pierre at Préaux, at the feet of his uncle Robert, son of Humphrey de Vieilles.

Children. 1. Waleran, born in 1104,¹⁰ succeeded his father as Count of Meulan. To him King Stephen, in 1136, betrothed his daughter, then aged two years only (Ord. Vital. lib. xiii, c. 22); but he did not marry her. He married, before 1141, Agnes, daughter of Amauri III., and sister of Amauri IV. and of Simon, all three successively Counts of Evreux.¹¹ She was heiress of Gournay-sur-Marne,¹² which she inherited from her mother Agnes, only daughter and heir of Anseau de Garlande, Seneschal of France. By her Count Waleran had six sons, Robert, Waleran, Amauri, Roger, Ralph, and Stephen.¹³ He became a monk at Préaux, twenty-one days before his death, which taking place in April 1166, he was buried in the chapterhouse of that Abbey near his father on the 9th, being then aged 61.¹⁴ His son Robert succeeded him.¹⁵

2. Robert, Earl of Leicester, twin with Waleran.¹⁰

3. Hugh, called the Poor, created Earl of Bedford by King Stephen (Gesta Stephani), who gave him in marriage the daughter of Simon de Beauchamp. (Ord. Vital., lib. xiii, c. 36). La Roque says that his wife was Alice d'Estouteville, and that he was the father of Hugh of Bedford, father by Amicia de l'Isle of Abel of Bedford. But this may be dismissed as wholly without proof.¹⁶

La Roque pretends there was a fourth son, Dreux, Seigneur de Boiesmont. He has been followed, without inquiry, by all subsequent genealogists, but may be easily convicted of error from his own preuves. For this Dreux is known only by a charter of his grandson William, Seigneur de Boiesmont, dated 1193. Here Dreux is positively called son of a Walter.¹⁷

4. Adelina: m. Hugh IV., Baron of Montfort-sur-Risle.¹⁸ Their son

Robert had the celebrated trial by battle with Henry of Essex in 1163, and died in 1178. His honour of Montfort was confiscated by Henry II. in 1161, but he retained Coquainvilliers and Orbec. He m. Clementia, dau. of Henry, Baron of Fougères in Brittany, and had five children, Hugh, Ralph, William, Henry, and Aelina, a nun. (Stapleton, Rot. Norm., vol. i, pp. 90, 118). Hugh seems to have held Montfort, for, adhering to King John, Philip Augustus, abt. 1204, declared the honour of Montfort, qui fuit Hugonis de Monteforti, to be of his domain. (De Lisle, Cartul. Normand, no. 113). The barony of Coquainvilliers escheated at the same time to the French crown. (Registrum regis Philippi de feodis, edit. Léchaudé, p. 185). Robert, son of Hugh by his wife M., appears to have obtained some restitution. He m. Odelina.¹⁹ The exact relationship of Thurstan de Montfort of Warwickshire to this family has not been ascertained.

5. [Alice].²⁰ Auberée or Albereda (so named in the cartulary of the Abbey of St. Vincent des Bois,²¹ of which her husband was the principal founder): *m.*²² Hugh II., Seigneur de Châteauneuf in Thimerais, Brézolles, Rémalard and Sorel. Hugh II. was eldest son of a certain Gervase (living 1112), who m. Mabel, only dau. and hr. of Hugh I., Seigneur de Châteauneuf, etc., by Mabel de Montgomery (living 1131), dau. of Roger, Earl of Shropshire. (Ord. Vital., lib. v, c. 13; xi, c. 44; Ivo Carnot., Epist. 261). Gervase had also four other children, Peter, Gervase, Guasco and Mabel. (Cartul. of St. Père at Chartres, pp. 287, 518). Hugh I. was *nepos et heres*²³ of Albert, Seigneur de Châteauneuf, etc., being in fact son of Waszo, Albert's brother. Albert witnessed a charter of Henry I., King of the French, actum publice in obsidione castris, quod vocatur Timerias, in 1058 (Cartul. of St. Germain-des-Prés),²⁴ and had, besides Waszo, two other brothers, Teudo and Guarin.²⁵

²¹ Du Chesne, Maison de Dreux, p. 58. He, the only authority on the subject, has there given a very sufficient account of the descendants of Hugh II. His pedigree of Hugh's ancestors I have, however, found it necessary to considerably modify. It should be observed that he does not notice Albereda's parentage.

²² Orderic says of the three sisters of Waleran Count of Meulan:—Una data est Hugoni de Monteforti, et alia Hugoni de Novo castello filio Gervasii, tertia vero Willelmo Lupello Ascelini filio, qui post mortem Roberti Goelli fratris sui adeptus est cum toto patrimonio arcem de Ibreio. (Lib. xii, c. 34, circa 1122.)

²³ Ord. Vital., lib. iv, c. 20. The statement is quite correct. We find Hugh described as nepos viri clarissimi Alberti, in one charter, and in another we read.—Hanc cartam firmaverunt filii Waszonis, Hugo videlicet, domni Alberti heres, et Guaszo, frater ejus. (Cartul. S. Petri Carnot., edit. Guérard, pp. 134, 140.)

²⁴ Du Chesne, Maison de Broys, preuves, pp. 6, 8.

²⁵ . . . Ego Albertus, nobilissimi Ribaldi filius, . . . favente mea carissima conjuge, Adelaisa nomine, . . . ecclesiam de Bruerolensi vico, quam pater meus in honore sancti Germani episcopi construxit . . . Sancto Petro cœnobii Carnotensis concedo . . . S. Radulfi comitis S. Walterii comitis, filii Radulfi. S. Hugonis comitis. S. Alberti, qui hanc largitionem fecit. S. Teudonis, fratris Alberti. S. Guarini, fratris ejusdem. . . (Cartul. S. Petri, p. 128.)

His²⁶ wife's name was Adelaisa,²⁵ and he was son of Ribald, who is styled in the cartulary of St. Père nobilissimus, and clarissimus, vir, and who to a charter of King Robert in 1028 subscribed himself Ribaldus Drocacensis (de Dreux). (Cartul. of Coulombs).²⁴

6. [Auberée]: Mahildis or Matilda (so named in the cartulary of St. Père): m. William Louvel²² (Lupellus), Seigneur d'Ivry and de Breval. They had four children, Robert, Waleran, Elizabeth and Helisente.²⁷ In 1172 the service of this Waleran was returned at one knight for the office of Butler and three knights for the barony of Ivry, besides others.²⁸ William Louvel had succeeded his elder br. Robert about 1119. Of his five other brothers²⁹ the only one certainly known is Roger le Begue, Seigneur de Grossœuvre. They were sons of Ascelin Goel, by Isabel, illeg. dau. of William de Breteuil. Ascelin, who was m. about 1092, had a brother William, and was son of Robert,³⁰ who died a monk at Bec. (Ord. Vital., lib. v, c. 20; viii, c. 24; xii, c. 13). This Robert, miles de castro Ebroico (Ivry), m. Hildeburge, niece of Gertrude, wife of Hilduin son of Hermar.³¹ Robert was son of another Robert, by Albereda.³²

²⁸ In 1076 (or 1071, according to the Benedictines) Roger d'Ivry, pincerna domini Willelmi regis et ducis Normannorum, founded a monastery at Ivry. (Chron. Rotomag., edit. Chéruel, p. 7; cf. Gall. Christ., tom. xi, p. 652.) The relationship which must have existed between this Roger and Ascelin is not known to me. From Orderic we learn that his wife was Adelina, dau. of Hugh de Grentemesnil. He must have been successor, if not son, of the Hugh, pincerna de Ivry, whom I find in three charters, circa 1066 (Cartul. S. Trinitatis de monte Rotomagi, edit. Deville, pp. 442, 446) together with Ralph (de Tancarville) the Chamberlain, Gerold the Seneschal, etc.

³¹ . . . Deinde, instigante diabolo, quædam neptis ejus [Geretrudis], nomine Hildeburgis, uxor scilicet Rodberti militis de castro Ebroico, vi et seculari potentia

7. Elizabeth or Isabel. She was one of King Henry I.'s mistresses, and by him she had a daughter.³³ She afterwards m. Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Pembroke;³⁴ he died in 1149. She m. secondly, Hervey de Montmorency. (Anselme, tom. iii, p. 567, citing William de Nangis, lib. viii, c. 37). Giraldus Cambrensis calls this Hervey, uncle of Earl Richard (Strongbow), and he has therefore been ranked by genealogists as brother of Earl Gilbert, which does not seem likely to be true. Whether step-father or uncle of Strongbow, he could not have been the Hervey de Montmorency who died a monk at Canterbury in 1205, as has been constantly stated.

8. [Vueve]: born in 1102, betrothed in 1103 to Amauri III., afterwards Count of Evreux, but she did not marry him.¹⁰ She may, of course, be identical with one of the preceding.³⁵

II. Robert II., born in 1104, who succeeded his father in the Earldom of Leicester and in nearly all the English estates, was called, according to the genealogies by the monks of Leicester, le Bossu and le Goczen, two epithets which have most probably the same signification. He married Amicia, dau.³⁶ of Ralph, Seigneur de Montfort and de Gael³⁷ in Brittany, and grand-daughter³⁸ (and not daughter, as the continuator of William of Jumièges,³⁹ and following him Dugdale, falsely state) of Earl Ralph of Norfolk. Amicia had been betrothed to Richard³⁶ (natural son of King Henry I.), who perished in the wreck of the White Ship in Nov. 1120. Her inheritance³⁶ was Breteuil, Lire and Glos, i.e., all her father's possessions in Normandy, which he had obtained from King Henry I. as being maternal grandson of Earl William fitz Osbern. The monks' genealogy relates that Earl Robert de consensu Amicie uxoris sue sumpsit in abbatia ista [de Pratis Leicestrie] habitum nostræ religionis, vivens juste et sancte quindecim annis et amplius; ipsa quoque Amicia uxor sua sanctimonialis apud Eton est effecta. This statement, that Earl Robert was a canon at Leicester from 1153 to 1168, must be received with some reservations; for we know that he was Chief Justice of all England in 1155, and in that capacity acted as Viceroy during the absence of King Henry from England in 1158-62, and in 1165-6-7. On the other hand, a charter, presently to be quoted, makes it appear that his possessions devolved upon his son in 1153, which lends some colour to the monks' statement. He died in 1168, according to Hoveden, the Chronicle of Mailros, the Annals of Waverley, and Robert du Mont.

invasit omnia quæ sancto Petro matertera ejus, pro sua contulerat anima. . . . (Cartul. S. Petri Carnot., p. 184.)

Children. 1. Robert, Earl of Leicester.

2. Isabel : m. firstly, Simon, Earl of Northampton and Huntingdon,⁴⁰ who died in Aug. 1153; and secondly, Gervase Paynell, Baron of Dudley.⁴¹

3. Hawise : m. William, Earl of Gloucester; he died 23 Nov. 1183, according to Robert du Mont and the Annals of Waverley.

5. There appears to have been a fourth daughter, a nun at Eton (Nuneaton) in Warwickshire. For King John confirmed to this cell of Fontevrault the grants which Robert, Earl of Leicester, dedit eis cum filia sua.

III. Robert III., Earl of Leicester, was called aux Blanches-mains, according to the monks' pedigree. The first mention I find of him is in a charter⁴³ by which Henry, Duke of Normandy and Count of Anjou, being then at Bristol, made known that he had restored to Robert, son of the Earl of Leicester, all the lands of Earl Robert his father in England, as his grandfather Count Robert of Meulan had held them: and Breteuil with the whole honour, as William de Breteuil had held it. Further, he gave Pacy with the whole honour, and all the land which William de Pacy⁴⁴ had held in England and Normandy, et dapiferatum Anglie et Normannie.⁴⁵

⁴⁵ In Normandy the members of the ducal household were the sole officers of state, and the dapifer—seneschal or steward—was chief justiciar. (Stapleton.) Mr.

He was one of the partizans of Prince Henry on the outbreak of the latter's rebellion in April 1173. On Sep. 29 he landed at Walton in Suffolk during King Henry's absence from England, and (Oct. 13) besieged and took the castle of Haughley. But four days afterwards his Flemish auxiliaries were routed at Fornham St. Genevieve by Richard de Luci the Viceroy, and Humphrey de Bohun the Constable, of England; and he and his countess were taken prisoners; he was sent to Normandy and imprisoned at Falaise. On the King's return in July 1174, he was brought back to England, and the same month his constables, Anketil Mallory and William de Dives, surrendered the castles of Leicester, Mount-Sorrel, and Groby. He did not however regain his liberty for some time, and it was not till Jan. 1177 that he was restored in blood and honours, at the Council of Northampton.⁴⁶

It is said that the Earl of Leicester was on pilgrimage to Jerusalem in 1179 (Annals of Waverley), and he does not, so far as I am aware, occur again in England till April 1183, when he and his brother-in-law, William, Earl of Gloucester, were arrested and imprisoned. The death of the younger Henry the following June probably led to their release. In 1190 the Earl of Leicester joined the Crusade, but died on the voyage.⁴⁷ He had married Petronilla, dau. and most probably sole heiress⁴⁸ of Hugh de Grentemesnil.⁴⁹ It is said that she was heiress of Hincley, and that to this manor was attached the Stewardship of England.⁵⁰ But though the office of High Steward may have been Eyton, in saying that Robert Bossu was high-steward, chief-justice, seneschal, or viceroy, indicates that a similar custom held in England, and it might therefore be concluded from this grant that Blanchesmains, and not Bossu, was the Chief Justice in 1155, etc., which would render the monks' statement possible. But this cannot have been the case. (See Complete Peerage, vol. v, p. 43, note b.) The hereditary office which Robert aux blanches-mains and his son exercised was that of High Steward of the Household, distinct, as far as I can see, from any such office as that of Justiciar; and it is this office which was, I take it, the subject of the grant of 1153, being probably given (as the charter suggests) by reason of the grantee being heir to Earl William fitz Osbern, who was Steward of Normandy, and also (it is said) of England. The grant of Bossu's lands to his son seems to have been some extreme piece of artfulness, the exact reasons for which can be now only a matter for conjecture.

⁴⁶ Eyton, Itinerary of Henry II., pp. 172, 177, 179, 182, 209.

⁴⁸ It is usually said that she had a sister and coh. Alice, m. to Roger Bigod, who died in 1107, i.e. the Roger of Domesday. I cannot trace this strange statement further back than Camden.

⁵⁰ Robertus accepit in uxorem Petronillam filiam Hugonis de Grantemesnil cum honore de Hincelee, et aliis possessionibus ipsius Hugonis quas habuit in Anglia; et extunc primo honor de Hincelee est conjunctus comitatui Leicestrie. On this latter statement, by the monks of Leicester, it is sufficient to quote a charter of Robert (aux blanches-mains) confirming to the monks of Lire in Normandy omnes donationes incident on the tenure of Hinckley, it is in the highest degree improbable that any Grentemesnil was Steward of England. For there is no evidence that I know of to shew that Hinckley ever appertained to the Grentemesnills, who probably lost all their English possessions early in the century.

Children. 1. William, called de Breteuil. He is said to have been a leper. I place him first as he precedes his brother Robert in charters.

2. Robert, Earl of Leicester.

3. Roger, Chancellor to William, King of Scots, who gave him, early in 1189, the See of St. Andrews—John, Bishop of Dunkeld, not objecting, though he had before been consecrated to St. Andrews.⁵¹

4. Amicia: second wife of Simon, le Chauve, Count of Evreux, whose first wife was named Mahaut. (Cartul of Coulombs). Of his children, those certainly by his second marriage were: Simon, afterwards Earl of Leicester; Guy de Montfort, Seigneur de la Ferté-Alais in the Gâtinais;⁵² and, most probably, Petronilla, the wife of Bartholomew de Roye.⁵³ Count Simon died in 1181, and Amicia is said to have subsequently married William des Barres, who by Rigord and by Geoffrey de Vinsauf is styled Count of Rochefort.⁵⁴ But I cannot give any authority for this marriage.⁵⁵

5. Margaret: m. Saher de Quincy,⁵⁶ afterwards Earl of Winchester.

IV. Robert, "son of Petronilla," succeeded as Earl of Leicester on his father's death. He too was accompanying Richard I. on the Crusade, and his valour is celebrated by Geoffrey de Vinsauf.⁵⁷

During King Richard's captivity, Philip Augustus invaded Normandy. Richard, having regained his liberty, passed into Normandy to make war on Philip, and routed him between Blois and Freteval, on the 5th July 1194. Previously however (June 15) the Earl of Leicester, who commanded the English forces, had been taken prisoner, and confined in the castle of Etampes.⁵⁸ His captor, we are told, was a knight of Picardy, Matthew de Mailly, Seigneur de Senlis near Clersay. ⁵² A mandamus of King John calls him nepos of the Earl of Leicester. (Rot. de contra brevibus, de anno secundo, m. 6.)

⁵³ I do not add Bertrade (wife of Hugh, Earl of Chester) who was aged 29 (at least) in 1185-6. (Rot. de dominabus, edit. S. Grimaldi, p. 8.) For Amicia (whose marriage, there is reason to suppose, took place about 1166-9) could not have been married in 1156. Bertrade's cousinship with King Henry II. is to be explained, not by any descent from the Beaumonts, which indeed would yield nothing of the sort, but from the fact that her grandfather's sister was the notorious Bertrade de Montfort, wife of Fulk le Rechin, Count of Anjou, and ancestress of King Henry.

⁵⁵ La Roque gives Amicia (without proof) yet another husband, Alberic I., Count of Dammartin.

⁵⁶ Cuinchy, between Béthune and la Bassée, on the frontier of Artois and Flanders. This can be shewn with some degree of probability.

⁵⁸ Anno Domini 1194, 17 kal. julii, Willelmus [Robertus] comes Lecestrie, vir fortis et magnanimus, a rege Philippo captus est, et Stampis in carcere positus. (Rigordus de gestis Philippi Augusti.)

tions of peace between the two monarchs were agreed upon between Issoudun and Charroux on the vigil of St. Nicholas (Dec. 5) 1195, and ratified at Louviers in the following January. Philip acquired, on the Norman frontier, Gisors, Neaufle and the Vexin Normand, Neufmarché, Vernon, Gaillon, Pacy, Ivry and Nonancourt. Pacy, indeed, was the price of the liberation of the Earl of Leicester, who, when yet in captivity, ceded that castle to Philip Augustus,⁵⁹ and by a letter yet extant in the archives of France, prayed King Richard to ratify the cession.⁶⁰ Wherefore, in the letter⁶¹ by which Richard engaged to observe the peace, it is recited that quitationem illam quam comes Lecestrie domino nostro Philippo, regi Francie, fecit de castello Paciacy, tam in feodo quam in dominio, cum castellaria sua et pertinentiis ipsius, ratam habemus et firmam; finally he stipulated that hinc omnibus peractis, comes Lecestrie et omnes prisiones et ostagii prisonum, prout divisum est, hinc inde liberabuntur. The cession of Pacy was confirmed by Roger Bishop of St. Andrews, Amicia Countess of Montfort, and Simon Seigneur de Montfort.⁶⁰ The same Simon rendered himself surety for his uncle Robert Earl of Leicester, and with him were Gervase de Castello (Châteauneuf in Thimerais) and Roger de Meulan (Vicomte d'Evreux).⁶⁰

The Earl of Leicester married Lauretta, daughter of William de Braose or Briouze, Lord of Bramber, Brecknock and Gower. With her was given in frank marriage Couvert in the Bessin, and also the manor of Tawstoke, co. Devon, 'parcel of the honour of Barnstaple possessed by her ancestor Judicael, son of Alured. In 1208 Philip Augustus confirmed to the monks of Lire all that Laureta quondam comitissa Leycestrie had given de libero maritaggio suo de Covert in Normannia.⁶² It appears therefore that the Countess Lauretta was dead in 1208, and the statement in the Chronicle of St. Evroult, that the noble Countess of Leicester died in 1212, refers perhaps to Amicia, sister and principal heir of the last Earl. For in 1204, as Amicia Countess of Leicester, she ceded to Philip Augustus her castle of Breteuil, and all that her brother had possessed over sea, in exchange for the castle of St. Léger in Iveline.⁶³ By charter, actum Parisius anno Domini MCCIII, regni nostri anno XXV,⁶⁴ King Philip gave to Aubert de Hangest in perpetuum villam que dicitur Pons S^{ci} Petri, cum pertinentiis suis ad usus et consuetudines Normannie, sicut R. quondam comes Lecestrie illam tenebat eo termino quo eadem villa in manum nostram devenit.⁶⁵ In 1203, King

⁶⁰ See Appendix, nos. xii-xvi. Gervase Seigneur de Châteauneuf was son of Hugh III., and grandson of Hugh II. by Albereda de Meulan. Roger de Meulan was a yr. son of Count Waleran.

John being at Dol, a letter of commisimus (dated 19 Sep.) made known to Geoffrey fitz Peter that We have committed dilecto et fideli nostro R. Earl of Leicester the whole of Richmondshire, as the Count of Brittany⁶⁶ had held it, excepting the castles of Richmond and of Bowes.⁶⁷ In 1204, 24 March, a writ issued to the sheriff of Northampton bidding him make the Earl of Leicester have without delay Fermingho and Siresham, which the grandfather of the said Earl had given to the Bishop of Lincoln in exchange for Cnitheton;⁶⁷ and, on May 7 following, the treasurer was ordered to compute with G. fitz Peter for 29*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* which the said G. had paid to the Earl of Leicester by the King's command.⁶⁷

From the foregoing it is evident that the two dates hitherto advanced for the death of the Earl of Leicester, viz. 6 Jan. 1204 and 20 Oct. 1206, are alike erroneous, and that his decease must have occurred on some day between April 1204 and the close of the same year according to the ancient style of reckoning. He died childless, and was the last Earl of Leicester of the house of Beaumont.

Anno Domini 1159, kalendis augusti, Robertus de Novoburgo vicedominus totius Normanniæ, vir magnæ prudentiæ et bonitatis, multatus infirmitate factus est monachus Becensis ecclesiæ, sua omnia propria quæ magna erant, prius pauperibus largiter distribuens. Obiit autem tertio kalendas septembris, qui quinque fere hebdomadis monachus existens suæ abstinentiæ et admirandæ religionis, virtutum etiam omnium in brevi Dei virtute ditatus, auspicio omnibus ecclesiæ majoribus bene vivendi reliquit exemplum? Cum antea dives, nunc quidem pauperrimus secutus est Christum. (Chron. Becci, apud La Roque.)

Robertus de Novoburgo, totius Normanniæ vicecomes aut vicedominus, id est dapifer, innumeris divitiis pauperes inter et ecclesias divisit, in monasterio Becci religionis habitum, anno 1159 kalendis augusti induit. Eodem mense, tertio videlicet kalendas septembris, ad superiores auras evolavit. (Chron. Becci, apud Neustriam Piam.)

Anno 1160, mense Julio, Robertus de Novoburgo, dapifer et justitarius totius Normanniæ, adversa valetudine coactus gibbum cameli deposuit, videlicet innumeras divitias ecclesiis et monasteriis et pauperibus dividens, et ad ultimum in monasterio Becci, quod præ omnibus diligebat, habitum monachi sumens per unum mensem. Ibi penitentiam fructuosam egit et tertio kalendas septembris hominem exiit sepultus in capitulo Becci quod ipse propriis sumptibus mirifice ædificaverat. (Chron. Normanniæ.)

HENRY II. OF FRANCE AND THE DOWAGER LADY FLEMING.

Communicated by JOSEPH BAIN, F.S.A. Scot.

Just fifty years ago, a great lawyer, unrivalled in his day for his knowledge of Scottish family history and consistorial law, in one of his learned publications¹ revealed the details of the liaison between the King of France and Lady Fleming, and the early death of the issue of that connexion, Henry of Angoulême, Grand Prior of France, who was killed in a brawl at Aix in Provence in June 1586. Mr. Tytler had referred to this intrigue, in a work published shortly before,² citing a letter from Sir John Masone, the English Ambassador in France, to the English Council on 18th April, 1551, who informed them, among other news, that the Lady Fleming had just departed from Amboise, with child by the King, Catherine de Medicis herself being in the same condition.

Mr. Riddell showed by undoubted evidence, that Lady Fleming was Janet or Jean Stewart, natural daughter of James IV, who had been married to Malcolm, Master of Fleming (afterwards 3rd Lord), under a marriage contract of 27th February, 1523, followed by a Papal dispensation, as they were within the forbidden degrees, and had omitted to procure it before the ceremony. Her husband fell at Pinkie on 10th September, 1547, leaving her with six children, two of whom, James and John, were successively the 4th and 5th Lords. The elder of these two sons had been sent to England as a hostage for his father, when taken prisoner at Solway Moss in 1542, and must have remained there for six years at least. For in a letter to the Protector Somerset on 9th August, 1548,³ Henry Johnes informs him that—"Lady Fleming hath begged my lord Bowes⁴ of the Governor, and sent him to Stirling, intending he shall redeem her son, prisoner with the Earl of Cumberland at this present." The young Queen Mary was at that moment embarked off Dunbarton Castle, waiting a fair wind for France, and Lady Fleming as her governess must have accompanied her, though it is not expressly stated in the letter. Mary Fleming, her own daughter, was one of the noble children who attended the young Queen, all being about the same age, six or seven years.

The next news of the "gallant widow" (as Mr. Riddell styled her), is in a second letter from Masone, the English Ambassador, still with the French Court at Amboise on the Loire, on 29th April, 1551,⁵ informing the English Council, among other news from Scotland, that—"the post hath also brought word that the Lady Fleming is brought abed of a man child, whereat our women here do not much rejoice." Finally Mr. Riddell added, on the authority of MSS. in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, that on 22nd August, 1560, the Privy Council of Scotland applied to the English Government for a safe conduct to "Lady Fleming and Lord Hary de Valoys, her natural son by Henry II. King of France." These several pieces of evidence show that the captivating Scotswoman could be no other than the Dowager Lady Fleming, and that having been married in 1523, she was probably at least forty years of age when she attracted Henry II in 1550.

It is, therefore, not a little odd to find the errors that have been made regarding this lady in a work of authority such as Anselme's "Genealogical and Chronological History of the Royal House of France," where, while giving correctly the name of her son by the King, he calls the mother "N. de Leviston damoiselle Ecossoise." Others call her one of the "Queen's Maries," then mere children of nine or ten years, and one, as already observed, being Lady Fleming's own daughter.

Misled no doubt in this way, the great Balzac, in his "Etude sur Catherine de Medicis," a work which, for a Frenchman, shows a remarkable knowledge of the kinship between that Queen and the Scottish royal family, relates how, in the absence of Diana of Poitiers from Court, Catherine arranged a "ballet," wherein six young girls should recite a piece of poetry to Henry—four of them (including the Queen of Scots and her own daughter Elizabeth), being mere children, intended to set off (ressortir) the charms of two who had reached womanhood, viz., "Miss Fleming," a near relative of Catherine's uncle (by marriage), the late John Duke of Albany, and Clarisse Strozzi, her own cousin—the Scotswoman being a blonde, and the Italian a brunette, with dark hair and lovely hands—that Henry yielded to the charms of the former, and had by her Henry de Valoys, the son already mentioned. And in a late interesting work on "Old Touraine," by Theodore A. Cook, the author, evidently treating of the same event as Balzac, says (vol. i, p. 265, and ii, p. 22)—"A fête was got up at St. Germain, with Marie Stuart to adorn it, and a certain Miss Fleming, whose fresh beauty served to attract the King for a season from the Duchess,¹ but the youthful Scotswoman was no match for the widow." The "youthful Scotswoman" however, must give place to the buxom Dowager. If other evidence is necessary, we have it from Brantôme, her contemporary, who frequented the Court, and styles her "Madame Flemynge." The remarkable and outspoken account which he gives of Lady Fleming's demeanour and remarks on the affair, will satisfy the inquirer in these bypaths of history, that the fair intriguante was no novice, but knew very well what she was about. ("Œuvres Complètes du Seigneur de Brantôme," Tome vii, p. 548.)

OLIVER CROMWELL AND HIS "STUART" DESCENT.

One of the most important papers that has appeared in the Genealogist is "the Steward Genealogy," by Mr. Walter Rye (N.S., ii, 34), in which the spurious pedigree claimed by the maternal ancestors of Oliver Cromwell was finally disposed of. The subject had already been discussed by another of our leading genealogists, Mr. Bain, in the Archæological Journal, but he, it would seem, held that, though the details were inaccurate, the fact of the Scottish descent of these "Stewards" might be true in the main. Mr. Rye destroyed it root and branch. But neither of these eminent experts was aware, so far as I can find, of the quarter from which this spurious, but really ingenious descent, was derived. From the collections of Augustin Steward (Add. MS. 15,644) it has been naturally concluded that he was, as Mr. Rye wrote, "the compiler or concocter, which you will, of the family history," (p. 40), and the date suggested for this concoction is "about 1567." It was certainly well developed in 1570, the monument (in Ely Cathedral) of Robert Steward, who died in that year, displaying the Stewart coat, with its fess chequy, as the first of his eleven quarters.

But the true originator of the legend would seem to have been Robert Welles alias Steward, last Prior and first Dean of Ely, concerning whom this curious passage is found in Wharton's Anglia Sacra (I, 685):—

Decanatum adeptus, nomen gentilitium Stewarde homo ventosus deinceps adhibuit ; et nobilitatis suæ opinione inflatus, familie suæ genealogiam scriptis commendavit. Hanc subjicere æquum duxi ; ne Robertus, cui ob restitutam Historiam Eliensem, unicam suscepti laboris mercedem perderet.

This is followed by the "Genealogia Roberti Stewarde Prioris ultimi Eliensis ab ipso conscripta" (pp. 68-69), which describes itself as "breviter extracta e rotulis Heraldorum anno m^oxxii." This date corresponds fairly with the confirmation of arms alleged (by Augustin Steward) to have been made to the Prior by Wriothesley in 1520, and the heraldic tastes of Robert are confirmed by the armorial drawings found in his MSS.¹

A brief chart pedigree will connect the relevant individuals:—

I cannot but suspect that this spurious descent was no amateur performance, and that professional heralds had a hand in its concoction. It is pleasant to reflect that, at the present day, the College of Arms is the place where such spurious descents as these would, on the contrary, be detected and exposed.

NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY OF EXELBY OF LONDON, HERTS, &c.,

DESCENDED FROM A BRANCH OF THE YORKSHIRE FAMILY OF THAT NAME.

By H. D. ESHELBY, F.S.A.

In a paper contributed to "The Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Journal"¹ I have dealt with the early genealogy of the family of Exelby of Exelby, and Dishforth, co. York, and traced the main line of descent in its native county. While collecting materials for that account, a considerable quantity of information relating to a family of the same name, which was settled in London in the middle of the sixteenth century, has been accumulated, and from the information so gathered together, several interesting lines of descent, in one case coming down to the present day, have been compiled. That this family was an offshoot of the Yorkshire stem, I have no doubt, and probably a single link only is wanted to establish the connection.²

The information here collected will, it is hoped, be useful to genealogists, and it will certainly lighten the labours of any who may hereafter be interested in the subject. It is almost entirely the result of original research in a field hitherto unworked, and now published for the first time.

Although my interest in this branch of the family is not personal, I should have been glad to follow further than has been done some of the lines in the pedigree which have been necessarily left abruptly in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, as I am satisfied that further research would add considerably to the facts here recorded relating to this family at those periods, but since this would involve searches in the registers of populous parishes in London, and probably some of its suburbs, over an extended period, my readers will appreciate the difficulties of the case. Moreover, it seems most probable that with the exception of the one family which descended through Miles Exelby, the Vicar of S. Keverne, Cornwall, (ob. 1641) all the other lines of these southern Exelbys are now extinct in the male line.

¹ Vol. x. See also an extension of the paper in "The Genealogy of de Eskelby or Exelby of the North Riding, co. York." Privately printed.

² The above was written after a careful study of the wills of Robert and George Exelby, A.D. 1558, and, at the moment of going to press, this conclusion is in an interesting manner proved to be correct. From his will, I inferred that George Exelby was not permanently resident at Sawtry, co. Hunts, where he died. A comparison of the Christian names of the relatives mentioned in both the wills with those borne by a family of Exelbys, who were settled at that date at Norton le Clay, in the parish of Cundall, Yorks, showed such a similarity, that I had strong reasons for believing in a close relationship. I also surmised that the surname Penteffe, as given in the wills, might be the North country name Penteth, written or copied by one to whom it was unfamiliar. These clues led me to a search in the index to the Richmond (Yorks) wills, where I discovered the will of the Richard Penteth referred to, which cleared up the matter. He was of Norton le Clay, made his will in 1570, mentions his wife Margaret, sister Ellen, son Peter, daughters Margery, Agnes, and Sissy, and "George Exselbe my servant," who was his nephew by marriage, and no doubt the son of the brother John Exelby, mentioned in both the wills. Other confirmatory evidence is supplied from the will of this John Exelby of Norton 1585, but as I purpose dealing elsewhere with this Norton branch, the above particulars will suffice as establishing the Yorkshire origin of the family here under notice.

It was in 1502 that one Robert Exelby,¹ who had been sometime Prior of Newstead, near Stamford, was appointed by the Bishop of Lincoln, Prior of Fineshed, where he died in the same year.² Forty years later, in 1541, another Robert Exelby, in holy orders, and not improbably a kinsman of the Prior, either held the living of Coppingford, co. Hunts, or was Curate there, he was appointed Rector of the adjacent parish of Sawtry, All Saints, in 1551, where he died in 1558-9.³ His will, proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, is to the following effect :—

The will of Sir Robert Exilbye late parson in Sawtry 1558. In the name of God. Amen. 29 Dec. 1558. ¹ John Exelby (who was one of the family of Exelby of Exelby) was Vicar of the Collegiate Church of Ripon from 1420 until his death in 1471. His will is printed in Surtees Society, vol. lxiv, in it he mentions "my brother Robert and his wife."

² Bridge's "Hist. of Northamptonshire" gives a list of Priors of Fineshed, and says that a vacancy occurring on the death of Simon Bulwick in 1502, the Convent elected Robert Stokys, who was set aside by the Bishop, and Robert Exelby, Prior of Newstead, near Stamford, was appointed to the government of the house; he died the same year. Vide also Reg. William Smyth, Bishop of Lincoln.

³ In February, 1514, he witnessed the will of William Johnson of Copmanford; in August, 1542, the will of John Parker, "parson of Copmanford;" in 1545 that of John Stone of Copmanford, in which he is styled "my curate Sir Robert Exelbe," and in the will of William Slade of Copmanford, which he witnessed in 1557, he is styled "parson of Copmanford" (Hunts and Herts Wills, Peterboro'). In the Book of First Fruits in P.R.O. he appears as paying the first fruits for the Rectory of "Sawtry Bunmys" on 6 May, 5 Edw. VI. (1551).

quarter of wheate. Witnesses William Cockson Thomas Lane Rychard Webbe wythe other moe and they to have for there paines eyther of them twelve pence viz three shillings (PCC. Chayney 7).

Administration was granted on the 27 April 1559 to Thomas Miclefeld the supervisor named in the will during the minority of Katherine Exulbye the Executrix named—George Exulbye the other Executor named having previously deceased.

The two brothers, Robert and George, died within a very short time of each other, their wills and the probate grants fix the date of the death of the former as having occurred between 29 December, 1558, and 22 February following; the latter died between 22 February and 27 April in the same year. It was a season of pestilence in England, and probably the fever and ague, which decimated the population, claimed them as victims.

The following is the will of George Exelby from the Peterborough Registry :—

In the name of God. Amen. I. George Exulbe the 22nd February 1558 being sick in body whole of mind &c. I commit my soule to Almighty God and all the Holy Company of Heaven and my body to the ground willing it to be buried if I die at this part in the church yard of Copmanford. In witness whereof unto this my present will. I make the said Mr George Bellis and Edward Auger (sic) being at the making hereof Nicholas King, curate of Copmanford, Richard Knight, M^r Grendlif.

Proved 6 April 1559 at Stilton before the Ven. Thomas Rayner, Bachelor of Laws, Commissary and Official of the Archdeaconry of Huntingdon in due form of law.

¹ One James Exelby was of Norton le Clay in 1559, and from the Richmond Archdeaconry Calendar of Wills it appears that he died about 1591. His will, however, cannot now be found—it is supposed with many others of these wills to be lost. In 1567 this James Exelby obtained a lease from the Crown for 21 years of lands and tenements in Topcliffe, then or late in the tenure of Thomas Colier, and of lands and tenements in Norton le Clay, then or late in the tenure of Agnes Exelby, both these holdings being part of the endowments of the dissolved Chantry of S. Lawrence at Middleton Quernhow, in the parish of Wath. This Agnes, probably a widow and the mother of James, is found holding the property in Norton le Clay as early as 1547. (Chantry Accounts, Roll 68.)

² I have little doubt that this was one of the Yorkshire family of Belaysse.

I think there can be little doubt that the Miles Exelby mentioned in the will above was the same person as the Miles Exelby of London who is found living there four years subsequently to the deaths of Robert and George Exelby. Of Miles and his descendants this paper will mainly treat.

Miles Exelby of the parish of S. Dunstan's in the West, Citizen and Merchant Taylor, was living there in 1562-3, in which year he paid the subsidy,¹ he married Alice Milward,² who would appear to have been his second wife. In 1568 he purchased jointly with her, property in Chancery lane,³ and died apparently possessed of considerable wealth in 1579. His will, dated the day before his death, is a very lengthy professional document, of which the following is an abstract :—

Miles Exelby of par of St Dunstan in the West Citizen and Merchant Taylor of London although sicke of bodie yet whole of mynde &c. Forasmuch as I am not able to give evrie of my daughters such portions in goods as in good will I ment by reason that I have bestowed all my substance or the moste parte thereof in purchasinge of lands for the advancement of my sonnes, after the Queen's highness shall be satisfied devise a full third part of lands held in capite &c to his eldest son William Exelby and the other two third parts to the uses of his will. He also devises to his wife for life another house in Chancery lane in the tenure of John Newsham or his assigns and after her death to his son Miles Exelby and his heirs with remainder to "my sonne William and his heirs" and in default "to my right heirs." These bequests to satisfy wifes claim for dower or jointure. ³ There was other property which not being held in capite did not come within the purview of the jury. The late Mr. T. C. Noble sent me the following abstract of a lease in his possession :—

Leightfoote to Exilby. Indenture 22 Jan 11 Eliz (1568) between Philip Leightfoote Citizen and Armorer of London and Miles Exelby Citizen and Merchant Taylor of London. Whereas Gerard Legh Citizen and Draper by deed dated 11 Jan 3 Eliz (1560-1) demised to Leightfoot the messuage then in Leightfoot's tenure "sometime called the Cage house parcel of the tenements called the Cage house rents being in Chancery lane" to hold &c for 23 years at the yearly rent of 4 marks. Leightfoote assigns his interest to Exelby for £55 with the proviso that Leightfoote and Mary his wife his servants and John Leightfoote his brother shall have ingress &c through the plot of ground adjoining the tenements to that in which Humphrey Penithorne lives for the purpose of drawing water from the well and also that Leightfoote for 13½ years shall hold the plot of ground containing 11 feet in length and 10 feet in breadth adjoining the premises. Exelby during the term of the lease granted to George Plummer shall permit to have and enjoy "one passage and way into the field called 'ficketts' fielde.'"

Ficketts' field is now the site of New Square, Lincoln's Inn. On the 2 May 22 Eliz. (1580) the Queen licences Alice Exelby, widow, to enfeof by fine or otherwise Richard Millward Barth Quynney, and Joan, his wife, to hold to Alice for her life, with remainder to William, her son, one messuage in the parish of S. Dunstan in the West (Pat. Roll 1197, 22 Eliz., Part xii, m 1), and on the 22 Dec. 1584 the Queen

It will be seen that this Miles Exelby left two sons living at the time of his death—

I, William Exelby, the elder, born 11 December, 1563, of whom hereafter.

II, Miles Exelby, baptised 8 April 1574, he married in or before 1595 Bridget Passmore, and in that year sold to his brother William¹ the Chancery lane property left to him by his father. Between the years 1596 and 1605 he was resident in the parish of Bardwell, Suffolk, and is also occasionally described as of the adjacent parish of Ixworth. He seems to have been three times married, the name of his second wife being Rebecca, and of the third Elizabeth (perhaps Luckyn). He died in 1616-7² and had issue three sons, Miles, Robert, who apparently died young, and William, born 1603; and three, or perhaps four daughters, grants to Alice, late wife of Miles Exelby, an annuity to be assigned by the Court of Wards and Liveries out of the property in S. Dunstan in the West, together with the wardship of William the heir. (Pat. Roll 1260, 27 Eliz., Part 7, m. 6.)

¹ Indenture 19 July 37 Eliz. (1595) between Myles Exelby second son of Miles Exelby late Citizen and Merchant Taylor of London now deceased and William Exelby of London gent. In consideration of £125 . 10 . 0 Miles sells to William all that messuage &c late in the occupation of Tho^s Trowte skinner now in John Jennings shoemaker and the shops &c in Chancery lane. Miles Exelby and Bridget now his wife. William Reynolds and Lucy his wife by deed dated 6 Apl. 11 Eliz (1569) and enrolled in the Hustings Court, granted the same to Miles Exelby, deceased, and Alice, his wife. A lease dated 7 April 21 Eliz. (1579) of the premises by Miles the father to James Trowte for 25 years at 53s 4d per ann. (Close Roll, 38 Eliz., Part 18, Exelby and Exelby).

Indenture 16 April 39 Eliz. (1597) between Miles Exelby of Ixworthe co Suffolk gent and William Exelby of Northawe co Herts gent. Miles E and Bridget his wife in consideration of certain sums of money bargain and sell to William all that mess: in the tenure of Thomas Trowte &c. Enrolled 29 Aug (Close Roll, 39 Eliz., Part 1, Exelby and Exelby).

Among the Chancery Proceedings there is a Bill filed 10 May 1599 by Myles Exelby of Bardwell, co. Suffolk, against John Nutte of Ixworth in the same county for recovery of divers sums of money. Nutte being charged with absenting himself and with having made over his estate to his mother Joan, and Thomas and Samuel, two of his brothers. (Chancery Bills and Answers, Eliz. E.E. 4, No. 23.) There were also some proceedings in Chancery by this Miles against Robert Davye of Bury S. Edmunds in Dec. 1600, in connection with money transactions; he is then styled as of Bardwell, co. Suffolk. (Ch. B and A., Eliz. EE, No. 26.) He appears as paying the subsidy in 1596-7 at Bardwell, in Blackburn Hundred, Suffolk, and also at Hunston in the same county.

In 1597 we learn more about him from some Star Chamber Proceedings (Eliz., Bundle 12, No. 7, Attorney-General v. Exelby and Others) when in his answer, sworn 22 Nov. 40 Eliz., to the information of Edward Cooke, the Attorney-General, he as one of the defendants says, "That trewe it is that he this defendant is a malster and hathe used the trade of maltinge by the space of theis two yeares nowe laste paste havinge noe other trade to lyve by for the mayntenance of himself and family. . . . And alsoe this defendant sayeth That he did at the request of one William Pasmore his brother in lawe who dwelleth in Lyncolnshire buye for him and his mother . . . foureteene combes of rye . . . sone after the buyeing of wch sayde Rye he this deft did cawse the same to be transported and carryed by water unto a towne called Spaldynge in the said County of Lyncolne to thende his sayde brother in lawe Willm Pasmore should there receyve the same." There being great scarcity of corn the Justices of the Peace caused it to be seized and sold in open market for the relief of the poor people. The Passmores of Algarkirk and Wigtoft were a good Lincolnshire family.

² I am indebted to the Rev. F. E. Warren, F.S.A., Rector of Bardwell, for the following extracts from his Parish Registers, and also for the abstract of the will of this Miles Exelby.

Thomasin born 1599, Elizabeth born 1605, Alice, and possibly Bridget, unless she is identical with Elizabeth. I have not further traced his descendants; probably additional particulars respecting them could be gathered from Suffolk Parish Registers, &c., it may be that the William Exelby of Lynn Regis, Norfolk, who died before 1667, was one of them; this William left at least two sons, Thomas, living in 1667, and Jonah, then dead, "late of foreign parts a bachelor."¹

The posthumous child of Miles Exelby (I) was also a son, born 1580, who was named Richard (III). In 1605 he was of Bardwell, co. Suffolk, and in that year sold the Westminster property left to him by his father.² He married at Bardwell in 1608 Alice Garrold, and had a son Richard, baptised there in 1612, who died an infant. He apparently left Bardwell about that time, but had a daughter Phoebe, living in 1617, who is mentioned in her Uncle William's will; he was alive in 1632, but beyond that date I have not traced him. he appears to have had a dispute with his nephew Miles (the son of Miles) resulting in a Chancery suit to recover a bond and other papers.¹

Miles Exelby (I) also left four daughters—

Ellen Exelby, who appears to have been the issue of a first marriage, and who, on the 4th November 1577, married Edmond Bayneham,² gent. It will be seen that her father in his will (1579) calls her "my daughter Bayneham," and bequeaths to her "my seconde best Bo[w]ll of silver and one Salte of silver," apparently provision had been made for her otherwise, as she took no other interest under the will.

Elizabeth Exelby, baptised Dec. 1567,(?) married Oct. 29 1589, John Hankin, gent.³

¹ Richard Exelby complains that he was possessed of one specialty or bond wherein Miles Exelby stood bound to him for the payment of £14 : 10 : 0 and also divers other specialties and bonds wherein divers other men did stand bound in other summs amounting to £100 and ready money and other goods to the value of £50. He borrowed a desk of Miles Exelby and put all his bonds and evidences &c into it. Miles being a near kinsman. He locked the desk and left it in the house of Ambrose Evered to be safely kept Miles went there and claimed the desk and so obtained all the papers and took them to his own house about two miles distant. ² License issued by the Bishop of London 2 Nov. 1577, for the marriage of Edmond Bainham of S. Clement Danes, and Ellen Esselbee, spinister, of S. Dunstan's in the West, to be married at S. Dunstan's (Harleian Soc., vols. 25 and 26), where as will be seen, the marriage took place two days later. It appeared at first probable that the bridegroom might be the person of this name who a few years later became historically celebrated as Sir Edmond Bayneham, a noted adherent of the Earl of Essex, by whom he was knighted on the sands near Dublin, on the 24 Sep. 1599. He took an active share in that nobleman's rebellion in the following year, and undeterred by a narrow escape from execution with his leader and heavy penalties, he was one of the most desperate of the band engaged in the Gunpowder Plot. He was the messenger from the conspirators to the Papal Nuncio in Flanders in Sep. 1605, and also apparently to the Pope. (Foley's English Province of Jesus, &c.) He succeeded in evading the clutches of the law, and so escaped the fate of the other leaders, but the conspiracy was the direct cause of his death at any early age, for he was killed in a duel with Sir Griffin Markham in the Low Countries about 1609, the cause of which was some reference to his participation in the Plot. (Dom. State Papers, 1603-10.) A search has proved, however, that the two persons were not identical, as in the return of Sir Edmond's lands, dated 1 May 1601, it is set out that he held property in Kent "late belonging to Boxley Abbey," Pembroke Castle, co. Hereford, and also lands in Shropshire; and a Kent inq. p.m. says that William Bayneham esquire died at Boxley on 15 Nov 39 Eliz (1597) and Edmund Bainham esq his son and heire was then under age, namely 19 years 11 months and 17 days (born 28 Nov. 1578?). His mother's name was Martha, and her will, she being described as of S. Bride's, Fleet Street, dated 30 Dec. 1599, was proved in Feb. 1599-1600. (P.C.C. Wallop 11.) She mentions her sister Ellis—sons Edmonde, Anthony, Wheatlye my sonne Bennet Hassillwood my daughter, Prudence Fortescue my dau, and her children, Alice Bainham my dau of full age and Alice Fiske my daughter. I have given these particulars here as I have found surprisingly few references to this Sir Edmond in print, and also because it seems highly probable that he was a near relative, he might certainly have been a nephew, of the Edmond referred to above. Possibly there may be Bainham wills at Canterbury which might clear up this point. The records of Sir Edmond Bayneham's conspiracy are to be found in the Baga de Secretis—see Dep. K. Reports.

³ S. Dunstan's Parish Register, see note ante, the license was apparently issued out of the Vicar General's Office.

⁴ May 23 1594 Henry Hankin of London gent and Jane Exelbie of Great

Sara Exelby, concerning whom no particulars have been discovered. There were also other children, but they apparently died young and before their father.

(3) Inq. p.m., No. 51, 41 Ed. III—from which it appears that Walter died the 2 Aug., 41 Ed. III, leaving his son and heir, Robert, then aged fourteen years, and endowed ("legavit voluntate sua") his wife Orframinia for life with certain lands there specified.

Inq. p.m., No. 17, 7 Ric. II, being the Inquisition held after the death of Elizabeth, wife of Thomas de Burnham. It commences by reciting the possessions of Orframinia, "quæ fuit uxor Walteri de Poynton," and concludes with enumeration of Elizabeth's lands, who died Tuesday after the Feast of St. Gregory the Pope (March 12) last past, aged twenty-two years and upwards, and whose heir was her daughter Elizabeth, aged two years and more.

Writ in Close Roll, 18 Ric. II. Albreodus de Wittlebury to take possession of his moiety of the property of Orframinia, who was wife of Walter de Poynton. As to the Whittleburys much information is given in Cox's and Wright's "Histories of Rutland," and in Bridges' "Northamptonshire" vol. ii, besides what may be taken from Records at the Public Office. From these sources the facts in the pedigree have been supplied. This family is also spoken of by Dugdale in his "Warwickshire," p. 143, as "heretofore Lords of the Manor of Brinklow."

The family of Plessington is fully treated of in the "History of Yorkshire," commenced by the late Geo. Plantagenet Harrison, vol. i, p. 245.

REMARKS ON THE FOREGOING.

Walter de Poynton does not appear to have been the first of the family who had interests in Canewick. For in a Foot of Fines, co. Linc., 30 Edw. I, No. 128. There is evidence that Nicholas del Haye of Canewyke and Matilda his wife, granted to one Thomas de Poynton and Agnes his wife, and the heirs of their body, a certain messuage and lands in Canewyke for the service belonging to them, for ever. For this said Thomas gives twenty marks; and there are other traces of same Thomas in Hollis' MS., 32 Ed. I and 2 Ed. II. He may have been the father of Walter; and both of them were probably descended from the Judge Itinerant, Alexander de Poynton, temp. K. John, of whom there is a memoir in Foss's work on "The Judges of England," and who died about 1240 A.D., leaving several sons.

As to the shield of arms given in the Harl. Soc., vol. for 1877, "Visitation of Warwickshire" (Poynton and Wittlebury Pedigree), the quarterings are difficult to account for; and I should be glad of assistance from those who can unravel Heraldic knots better than I can.

Burke in his "General Armoury" assigns (1) Argent two bars Azure, in chief 3 hurts to Wittlebury, and (2) to Sidnall [?Sydenhall], but under the pedigree of Shuckburgh in "Warwickshire Visitation," Sydenhall bears Gules 3 dexter hands coupes Argent, and Lunell bears something much nearer to (2) viz., Azure a fess Argent between 3 crescents Or; (3) is given without tincture, and increases our difficulty of attribution. I am informed that in a window of Lapworth Church (Lapworth having been a seat of the Catesbies) this barry wavy coat appears minus the bend, and in the same window the lion of coat (4) is crowned. The crown being removed, it might be Poynton without the torteaury assigned to Poynton in Burke's "Armoury." With the remark that you cannot cut an Heraldic knot I conclude this paper.

FRANCIS J. POYNTON.

Notices of Books.

SCRIVELSBY, THE HOME OF THE CHAMPIONS, WITH SOME ACCOUNT OF THE MARMION AND DYMOKE FAMILIES. By the Rev. Samuel Lodge, M.A. London (Elliot Stock), 4to.

So much interest attaches to the families of Marmion and Dymoke, which have held the hereditary honour of Champion of England for so many centuries, that this descriptive account of their home and its surroundings should be gladly welcomed by readers who do not crave for an excess of genealogical or heraldic matter. It is to be regretted that the frontispiece, a coloured plate of the Dymoke arms, to which the reader is naturally attracted on opening the book, offers an opportunity for criticism which, in justice to heraldry, we are compelled to take advantage of. The crest is shown, and on page 161 is blazoned as "the scalp of a hare, ears erect, p.p.r.," which, we venture to think, should have been two asses ears within Sable, as the author would have known had he consulted the proper authority. This is a serious blunder for which there can be little excuse, more particularly as it is evidently a curious instance of canting heraldry. Jesters caps were, as everyone knows, adorned with ears in imitation of the organs of hearing of that interesting quadruped known in the slang dictionaries as the moke, derived from the same root as the French moquer, and other words with a similar meaning, a fact sufficient in itself to point to the origin of this singular crest. Another error is in the coat where the field of the second quarter is shown as Purple instead of Azure, and the field of the third quarter should be Vair. This may, however, be a fault in the printing. The author, in his remarks on the derivation of the name Dymoke, puts forward two theories, one being from the manor of Dimmok, in Gloucestershire, the other from the oak tree as the family totem. For the former no evidence is adduced, although by far the more likely of the two. There are several other interesting points which might be noted, and the volume is by no means lacking in the information to be expected in dealing with such a subject as the home of two ancient families. The illustrations are very good indeed and include a portrait of the late Mr. Francis Scaman Dymoke, the sad announcement of whose death appeared almost simultaneously with this account of Serivelsby.

LONDON SIGNS AND INSCRIPTIONS. By Philip Norman, F.S.A. London (Elliot Stock), 8vo.

This interesting work by Mr. Norman, with an introduction by Mr. Wheatley, forms a valuable addition to the Camden Library, and abounds with pleasant reading to while away the leisure hour. Our old friend the Cock of the Cock Tavern in Fleet Street, of which there is an excellent illustration, is treated of in the chapter upon birds and other sculptured signs, with the appropriate suggestion that the reader who wishes to view the relics of this ancient place of entertainment, cannot do better than partake of the good fare which is there daily provided for the hungry and, possibly, thirsty antiquarian. In the same chapter we learn that the Swan with Two Necks probably originated from the ancient custom of marking or "nicking" the cygnets, and that the wholesome tradition of the pelican who, in her piety, "turneth her beak against her breast and therewith pierceth it till the blood gush out, wherewith she nourisheth her young," is, according to Eugenius Philalethes, to be classed among our many popular and pleasing errors. In another chapter the learned author traces the history of the three kings, "Gaspar and Melchior and Balthazar," who appear to be the descendants (historically not genealogically) of the three Magi from the East, who brought their gold and frankincense and myrrh to the manger at Bethlehem. Heraldry, not to be outdone, in course of time assigned arms to these mystical personages: to Balthazar a shield, "Or, on a mount Vert an Ethiopian proper, habited in a tunic per pale, Azure and Gules, holding in the dexter hand a spear with a pennon per pale, Gules and Azure;" to Gaspar (or Jasper) a shield, "Azure, with an estoile in the dexter and a large crescent moon on the sinister, both proper;" to Melchior a shield, "Azure, with six estoiles proper." In short, with Mr. Norman as our guide, each sculptured stone on the walls of our great city would tell its tale, and convert our dull Metropolis into the fairy-land of antiquity.

EIGHT CENTURIES OF A GENTLE FAMILY.—Privately Printed.

A "Preliminary Sketch" of a proposed issue with the above title, of which we have received Part I., promises to be the commencement of an interesting and carefully worked out history of the family of Beresford and its connections. The writers, the Rev. E. A. Beresford, Mr. S. B. Beresford, and the Rev. W. Beresford, state that their object in issuing this "Sketch" is to obtain "co-operation in throwing any further light on the early periods of that history."

Notes and Queries.

CHARTULARIES OF THE NORMAN AND ENGLISH ABBEYS. — The vast importance to historians and genealogists of these chartularies cannot be over-estimated, inasmuch as they must contain, with other valuable information, the evidence necessary to fill up the hiatus in the pedigrees of our Norman ancestors. With the object of forming a Society to print these chartularies and those of their affiliated Priorities in England, invitations were issued by His Grace the Duke of Norfolk for a meeting to be held at Norfolk House on the 9th of last month for this purpose. The meeting, which was addressed by the Lord Bishop of Oxford, Mr. Maxwell Lyte, of the Public Record Office, Mr. J. H. Round, and others, resulted in the proposal being unanimously adopted, a Committee being then nominated as a first step. For further information on this subject we beg to refer our readers to Mr. W. A. Lindsay, Carlton Club, Pall Mall, the originator of the scheme, which we have no doubt, will meet with the approval and support of all interested in the history of the past.

HANDFASTING.—The following contract is, I think, of interest as illustrating the custom of "Handfasting."

EURE.—Your correspondent of this name is in error in stating (Vol. ix., p. 255) that George, Lord Eure, "was the only one of the old nobility who answered Cromwell's summons to his other House," for no less than nine lawful Peers were, in 1657, members thereof, of whom, indeed, one was a Scotch and one an Irish Peer. Among the seven English Peers were the Earls of Manchester, Mulgrave, Warwick, etc. A list of these and some remarks thereon is in Vol. i., p. 299, note "d" (see also Vol. ii., p. 84, note "c") of The Complete Peerage by

G.E.C.

JAGGER-PAGE FAMILY.—I shall be grateful for any information respecting the life or parentage of Benjamin Jagger, who assumed the name of Page. He is supposed to have been born in or near Norwich about the year 1765. He worked at Maltby's in Cheapside, London, and emigrated to America in 1797.

THE EARLDOMS OF DOUGLAS AND MAR.

Mr. Lindsay has said of my offer to write on the evidence laid before the "Mar Restitution" Committee on the titles of Douglas and Mar:—"I confidently await his onslaught" (ante Vol. ix, p. 197). That "onslaught" will, as before (in my article on Janet Barclay), consist merely in confronting the evidence with the records on which it professed to be based, and shewing again, as I shewed then, that—however incredible the assertion may appear—the evidence deliberately given, and of course accepted by the Committee, was, on several points, at direct variance with the records, and at variance, moreover, with the witness's own interpretation of them as Editor of the Exchequer Rolls. That is my case.

It was, admittedly, of the utmost importance for establishing the preamble of the Bill, to prove that Margaret, wife of William, and mother of James, Earls of Douglas, was Countess of Mar in her own right, and that her daughter Isabel succeeded her in that dignity. It was equally necessary to prove that Margaret's son James, who died in her lifetime, was only Earl of Douglas, and never Earl of Mar. Round these two points the struggle has throughout raged. Let us take them seriatim.

Firstly, as to James. Messrs. Burnett and Lindsay, before the Committee, strenuously urged that he was Earl of Douglas, but never of Mar also (pp. 28-9, 53). Had he been so, indeed, there was an end of their case. Yet when we turn from Mr. Burnett the witness to Mr. Burnett the Editor of the Exchequer Rolls, we are distinctly and ultroneously informed that he was Earl of Mar! In Mr. Burnett's introduction to Vol. iii, he is spoken of as "the eldest son of the Earl of Douglas, afterwards James, Earl of Douglas and Mar" (p. lxxxiii). Again, in this same volume his widow, also, is recognised by Mr. Burnett as Countess of Douglas and Mar. On p. 725 we read:—"Isobel, daughter of Robert II., wife of James, second Earl, called Countess of Douglas and Mar [p.] 691." The entry referred to on p. 691 records the remission of the custom on six sacks of wool to "the Countess of Douglas and Mar" ("Comitisse de Douglas et Mar"). Though no name, we see, is mentioned, Mr. Burnett unhesitatingly identified this Countess with the widow of Earl James, whom ut supra he similarly styles "Earl of Douglas and Mar." But when we turn again from Mr. Burnett the Editor to Mr. Burnett the witness before the Lords' Committee, we find her no less unhesitatingly identified (not with Isabel, the widow, but) with Margaret, the mother of the Earl!

9. MR. LINDSAY.—"Is there a reference there [p. 691] to Margaret, Countess of Douglas and Mar?"

MR. BURNETT.—"Yes: 'Et in remissione facta per regem Comitisse de Douglas et Mar,' &c., &c."

14. LORD BLACKBURN.—"Is it Margaret or Isabella?"

MR. BURNETT.—"It must be Margaret."

This, we see, is directly contrary to Mr. Burnett's verdict as Editor. Moreover, there is no "must" about it, so far as the entry itself is concerned. One Countess is prima facie as likely to have received the remission as the other, and indeed Mr. Burnett himself assumed, as Editor, it was Isabel. Of course, if (as the preamble required) Margaret alone could be Countess "of Mar," the entry could only refer to her, but there is nothing in the entry to prove this assumption, which indeed was the very point in dispute before the Committee!

Now if a mere "Southron" like myself had ventured to speak of James as "Earl of Douglas and Mar," one can imagine Mr. Lindsay overwhelming him with scorn. But, only last year, an article in the Scottish Review (xx, 252-3), from the pen of the present Lyon, contained these words:—

The Douglas or "Cavers" standard has long been a puzzle to antiquaries. It is described in the Catalogue [of the Heraldic Exhibition] as the standard of James, second Earl of Douglas and Mar, which was carried by his son, Archibald Douglas of Cavers at the Battle of Otterburn in 1388.

Now this catalogue was the work of Mr. Grant, Carrick Pursuivant, a "Scottish Herald," of whom Lyon went on to speak in high terms (p. 249). What has "Porteullis" to say to "Carrick?"

But indeed even Messrs. Lindsay and Burnett could not always agree about these titles and their use. Take, for instance, such evidence as this:—

p. 31. LORD BLACKBURN.—"Is it correct that William is never called Earl of Mar?"

MR. LINDSAY.—"On the contrary, my Lord, he is almost always called Earl of Mar after 1377, the date of the death of the last male Earl."

p. 53. MR. BURNETT.—"There are frequent mentions of both Earls of Douglas [James and William]; they are always called Earl of Douglas merely."

Before we leave Earl James and his wife, attention may be drawn to to this passage in Mr. Burnett's Introduction to his second Volume (p. lxxxii):—

"Sir James of Douglas, son of the Earl of Douglas, had immediately on Robert's accession, an annuity of 100 marks settled on him; £500 were paid him (sic) on his marriage to the king's daughter Margaret (sic), p. 433."

On referring to p. 433, we find, from the entry itself, that (though the annuity was paid to James) the £500 were paid not to James but to his father. We further find that his bride's name was not Margaret but Isabel.¹ This ultroneous substitution, by Mr. Burnett, of "Margaret" for "Isabel" of his own record, becomes more strange when we read in the Introduction to his fourth Volume (p. clxiii) that "there is abundant evidence of her name being Isabel, while Margaret was the name of her elder sister."

Returning once more to the entry relating "Comitisse de Douglas et Mar," which "must," Mr. Burnett told the committee, refer to Countess Margaret, we find the evidence proceeding as follows:—

11. CHAIRMAN.—"That is the only mention of Margaret?"

MR. BURNETT.—"The only mention in the Rolls."

12. "Under either name?"

"Under any name. She is called Countess of Douglas and Mar."²

I meet this evidence with a direct negative. It is not the case that this is "the only mention" of her "in the Rolls." We need go no further than the Index (ii, 647) to learn that she appears on the Rolls as "Countess of Douglas" in 1364.¹

² Minutes, p. 53.

More striking still is the case of her daughter, "the Countess Isabella." Let us look at this evidence (pp. 53-4).

17. CHAIRMAN.—"Have you anything [in the Exchequer Rolls] about the Countess Isabella?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"The Countess Isabella is not mentioned until shortly after her marriage, and she is always called Countess of Mar."
18. LORD BLACKBURN.—"When is she mentioned?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"About the very time of her marriage."
19. "What is she called then?"
- "She is never called anything but Countess of Mar."
20. CHAIRMAN.—"In the Exchequer Rolls?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"In the Exchequer Rolls. There is no mention of her under any other name."
21. LORD REDESDALE.—"When is she first called Countess of Mar?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"About the time of her marriage with Alexander Stewart."
22. LORD BLACKBURN.—"How is she brought in? Has she a remission of the tax on wool or what?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"I will refer you to the passage. This is an account rendered on the 24th of March 1405-6 by the custumars of Aberdeen, or collectors of the Aberdeen custom."
23. LORD REDESDALE.—"It is after her marriage?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"After her marriage . . . [24] That is the earliest mention of her in the Exchequer Rolls."
25. LORD KER.—"That was after her second marriage?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"Yes."
26. LORD REDESDALE.—"After the charter?"
- MR. BURNETT.—"After the charter."

I meet these persistent and repeated asseverations with two direct negatives. It is not the case that "There is no mention of her under any other name," and that "she is never called anything but Countess of Mar." It is not the case that the passage referred to above by Mr. Burnett "is the earliest mention of her in the Exchequer Rolls." The earliest mention of her on the Rolls is to be found, not in an account of 1406, but in one of 1391, fifteen years earlier. She is there merely styled "the sister of the late Earl of Douglas" ("sororis quondam comitis de Douglas.") We have, in fact, a series of entries relating to her, originating thus. Her brother, the Earl, had held an annuity of 200 marks charged on the Customs of Haddington. At his death she, as his sister and heir, became entitled to receive two-thirds of the annuity, while the balance formed the terce of his widow Isabel, her sister-in-law and namesake. Accordingly we find their respective husbands drawing these shares in right of their wives:—

"Et domino Malcolmo de Drommund, percipienti per annum de custumâ dicti burgi duas partes ducentarum marcarum hereditarie sibi contingentes ratione sponse sue sororis quondam comitis de Douglas . . . Et domino Johanni de Edmunston percipienti ratione Comitisse de Douglas sponse sue," &c., &c.²

In the next entry (16 March 1391-2) Drummond receives his share "ratione sponse sue," while Edmonstown draws his "ratione Comitisse de Douglas sponse sue." Either (as implied by the evidence) the styles in these entries are of importance, or they are not. If they are, it is strange, to say the least, that the alleged Countess in her own right has no style assigned her, while that of her sister-in-law (though she only bore it as her former husband's widow) is duly entered.¹ Is it on this account that these entries were thus ignored by the witness? It is at the Account of 13 May 1400 (from 29 April 1399) that Drummond last draws his share "pensionis sibi debite ratione sponse sue." Not till she appears upon the Rolls as the wife of her second husband is she styled Countess of Mar, a fact which (if, as I have said, these styles prove anything) is certainly significant, considering that she is not so styled before. Thus the entry quoted (ut supra) by Mr. Burnett (24 March 1405-6) styles her Countess of Mar ("domine Isabelle Comitisse de Mar.") But here again arises the question as to inference from these styles.

² Account of the Custumars of Haddington, rendered 15 Feb. 1390-1, (Exchequer Rolls, Vol. iii, p. 227).

24. CHAIRMAN.—"The husband is called Dominus de Mar?"

MR. BURNETT.—"Yes, and the wife is called Countess of Mar."

Mr. Lindsay called attention in a similar way to another such mention of the same parties:—

"You will observe that she is styled 'Issobella de Douglas Comitissa de Mar et Gareach,' and Alexander Stewart is not styled Earl of Mar."²

Yet, as an instance of how misleading such distinctions are, let us take the Account of the Custunars of Haddington, which Mr. Burnett did not quote, and compare it with the Aberdeen one of the same Session, which he does. The Haddington Annuity is entered as paid.

"Alexandro Comiti de Marr percipienti per annum hereditarie ducentas marcas ratione Isabelle Comitisse de Marr sponse sue."³

Here then Alexander is styled "comes de Mar" on the Rolls, though in the Aberdeen Account only three days before, he had appeared on them as "Dominus de Mar." This has an important bearing on the case of the first husband, Sir Malcolm Drummond. On this we read:—

LORD BLACKBURN.—"Is there anything to show this:—although Sir Malcolm Drummond may have styled himself 'Dominus de Mar,' he never claimed to be Earl of Mar in right of his wife, I think?"

MR. LINDSAY.—"No; I am not prepared to say he did not, but I cannot prove that he did. I put it in that way, because I am inclined to think that there is some slight evidence about it, but it is very slight. . . . He called himself 'Dominus,' but I cannot see that he called himself 'Count.' The question as to the circumstances under which a person who married a Peeress in her own right became Earl, would be a matter requiring much argument and consideration."⁴

Yet though the matter is here left thus doubtful by Mr. Lindsay, he subsequently appeals to the fact that Sir Malcolm is not described as "Comes" of Mar, and urges as an "inference" of the highest importance that—

"if it is clear that Sir Malcolm of Drummond was not described as Earl of Mar there, it is perfectly certain that she [Isabella] is not Countess of Mar as the widow (sic) of Sir Malcolm of Drummond."⁵

² Minutes, p. 42. Compare also Mr. Lindsay. (p. 30):—"Your Lordships will find at No. 471 a document, which is translated into English below, which describes 'John of Swinton' as 'Lord of Mar,' and 'Margaret, his spouse,' as 'Countess of Douglas and Mar.'"

³ Vol. iii, p. 613.

⁴ Minutes, p. 25.

⁵ Minutes, p. 32.

Passing over the fact that the Charter to which Mr. Lindsay here refers is of date 1397, and that Isabella was then the wife, not the "widow" of Sir Malcolm;¹ we find him basing his argument on the fact that Sir Malcolm is only described as "Lord" not "Earl" of Mar. But we have seen, in the case of Alexander Stewart, how interchangeably these styles were used. Nay more, we have Mr. Lindsay himself elsewhere, and for another purpose, insisting upon this very fact:—

MR. LINDSAY.—"I venture to submit that 'Earl' and 'Lord' are to all intents and purposes the same thing . . . Numbers of persons who are undoubtedly Earls are styled 'dominus,' although it is not done the other way. There are numbers of persons whose titles are interchanged."²

That is to say, to put it plainly, "Lord" means the same as "Earl," when it is desirable that they should do so; but when it is not, then there is a distinction from which a most important "inference" can be drawn. I need not comment on the unsatisfactory character of such evidence as this. It is best to explain it by confusion on the part both of counsel and witness.

Returning now to the reiterated assertions, in Mr. Burnett's evidence that Isabella "is never called anything but Countess of Mar" in the Exchequer Rolls; let us take this further evidence.

27. MR. LINDSAY.—"Are there many other references to Isabella, the Countess of Douglas (sic)?"³

MR. BURNETT.—"Yes, there are, later."

28. "Is she always called Countess of Mar?"
"Yes."⁴

What then are we to say to such an entry as "Isabelle de Douglas sponse sue?" (iv, 69.) This is a matter so simple that anyone can decide it at once. Is the evidence here and elsewhere accurate, or is it contradicted by the very entries themselves?

When the discrepancies I have laid bare in this paper are carefully considered, it cannot but be thought a most extraordinary and indeed suggestive circumstance that such evidence as this should have been formally given before a Committee of the House of Lords. Stranger still is it that it should be given by the very Editor of these Rolls himself, who was, moreover, described by Mr. Lindsay as "having made a considerable study of all the documents relating to the Earldom of Mar, and being very well qualified to explain any of them."⁵ Mr. Lindsay (who himself it will be remembered announced that he was "very familiar with the Exchequer Rolls") further informed the Committee that Mr. Burnett would state "that the originals of them have been in his custody, as the Government Editor, and he will certify that the printed copies of the documents, which have been in his custody, are correct."⁶ Accordingly, we read as follows:—

³ She was, of course, never Countess of Douglas at all.

⁴ Minutes, p. 54.

⁵ Minutes, p. 5.

⁶ Ibid, p. 28.

1. MR. LINDSAY.—“Have you searched the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland for reference to the Earls or Countesses of Douglas and Mar?”
MR. BURNETT.—“I have . . . [4] I have gone over them and examined them carefully.”
7. CHAIRMAN.—“Have you compared them with the paper which you propose to put in?”
MR. BURNETT.—“Yes.”
8. “And is it correct?”
“Yes.”¹

For my part I am content to take my stand on the single point of Mr. Burnett's evidence as to the date of “Janet Barclay's” death. This alone would prove my case as to the almost incredible carelessness with which his evidence was given and received. Nor should it be forgotten that my criticisms and corrections all refer to a very narrow range of extracts from the Exchequer Rolls.

But really the evidence as to the contents of these Rolls is of a piece with the whole proceedings. What I seek specially to insist upon is their essentially unsatisfactory character. Take for instance their treatment of this important point that the Erskines themselves only claimed to be heirs expectant to “ye half of ye fornemyt erldome & lordship.”²

LORD BLACKBURN.—“ . . . his claim is only to one-half of the lands, or rather his wife's half.”

CHAIRMAN.—“I take it for granted there was a sister.”

LORD BLACKBURN.—“I suppose there must have been.”

MR. LINDSAY.—“I do not think I can prove that to your Lordship; but otherwise, why should Sir Robert Erskine, in his first claim, have claimed half the lands?” &c., &c.

LORD BLACKBURN.—“I suppose his wife had a sister; we do not know who that sister was; still less do we know who was the elder of the two sisters.”

MR. LINDSAY.—“We do not,” &c., &c.

LORD REDESDALE.—“Was not the other half supposed to go to Lord Lyle?”

MR. LINDSAY.—“That suggestion was made in the case with which your Lordship is so familiar, but I do not think it ever was proved.”³

Is it possible, I ask, to imagine a more “lame and impotent conclusion?” The Lyle heirship, on which Lord Crawford's assumption is absolutely without proof, remains wholly unaccounted for, while the mysterious “sister” is left in such obscurity that for all we know, it would seem from this, she may, if she existed, have been the elder, and consequently the heir to the Dignity, and have been ousted somehow or other in those lawless times!

I think that those who have done me the honour to peruse my two articles, “Janet Barclay” and the present one, will admit that I have made out my case beyond the possibility of question, and that never was evidence more loosely given than that on which was based the preamble to the Act by which “Mr. Goodeve Erskine” became “Earl of Mar.”

J. H. ROUND.

² Mr. Lindsay claimed that this “erldome” was “certainly not” a territorial earldom (i.e., the lands merely), but the Committee would not listen to this, even the Chairman pronouncing, “That the whole clearly relates to the lands there can be no doubt at all” (p. 38).

The preceding wills of the parents of Joane Hathorne, wife of Phillip Lee sometime of St. Dionis Backchurch, citizen and grocer of London, and of Binfield in Berks., are taken from the invaluable Gleanings of Mr. H. F. Waters and have an added interest in the fact that the eldest son of the testators, Major William Hathorne, was the first American ancestor of the well-known author, Nathaniel Hawthorne (as he chose to write it,) and himself one of the most important personages in the infant Colony on Massachusetts Bay—a Major in the Indian Wars, Representative at the General Court, Speaker of the House, Deputy and Magistrate as well as an energetic and successful man of business. For the well earned and graceful compliment paid by Mr. Waters to the commanding abilities of the emigrant ancestor of the novelist, I refer the reader to the authorities cited.¹

on the estate of this Francis Lee of Wendover had been printed,¹ is useful as furnishing the information that he was unmarried and a clergyman, but it leaves his affiliation as far away as ever. It seems clear that he was not of the Binfield line, every member of which is now accounted for, and it is highly probable that he was not of the Quarrendon family at all, but as has already been pointed out, of the totally distinct family of Lee of Hartwell.

In the above legatee Joan Hopkins, wife of Thomas Aylward we have no difficulty in recognising the quondam concubine of Cromwell Lee of Holywell in Oxon, the "tow children" being his base son Robert Lee (whose will follows) and Alice Hopkins, probably the offspring of another father, while the Thomas Ayleward is probably identical with the Thomas Allwin who appears among the witnesses of Cromwell Lee's will,³ and so was in a position to know just how large a dot would compensate him for lack of freshness in his bride.

P.C.C. (Alchin 125).

Comparison of the above transcript with the brief abstract which follows, and which I owe, with many others, to the courtesy of Colonel Henry Lee, of Boston, Mass., who has had thorough search made of the Barbadian records, enables us with certainty to identify the Plauter of Barbadoes with the second son of Henry Lee, citizen and draper of London, hitherto unidentified, while the legatee, the eldest son of the same, is probably a Mr. Henry Lee, merchant, who was buried at St. Michaels in Barbadoes 27 August, 1662. The will of the latter has not been found.

Will of ROBERT LEE of parish of St. Martins vintree; Dated 7 August 1641 (qu. clerical error for 1645). If I dye beyond the seas to stand to the Courtisye of some well minded Christian; brother Henry Lee of London of parish of St. Martins in the vintree, whole estate to him whether abroad or at home. Proved 23 August 1654.

(Barbadoes (W.I.) Registry, Vol. i, fo. 186.

The dates of the two probates within nine days of each other is, like the date of the second will, probably an error of the transcriber or the registering clerk. Most probably that in Barbadoes was either a year before or after the London probate, presumably the latter when the legatee had gone out to enter into possession of his brother's estate, and in this view I am supported by the burial already cited.

The Act Books in the Pre. Court for the year 1662 have perished, but the wording of the above Act makes it clear that the former grant was to the brother William Lee, who died in 1667, being buried at Binfield Feb. 6 of that year.

²⁰ His diebus Hildefonsus Rex Hispanorum duxerat [uxorem] filiam Guidonis Comitis Ducis Aquitanorum, quam habuit de Mateode supradicta. (Chron. Malleac. ad ann. 1069.)

²¹ Pellicer pretends that she was sister of Raymond of Burgundy, Count of Galicia; Roderic of Toledo says she was born in Tuscany; Luke of Tuy that she was dau. of a Marquis of Este.

²² Historians agree as to this date. I find, however, a charter of Alfonso:—Ego Adefonsus Dei gratia Tolletani imperii Rex et magnificus triumphator, cum consensu dilectissime uxoris mee Berte Regine, proposui facere, sicut facio, hanc testamenti seriem ad monasterium sanctorum Dei Servandi et Germani, quod extat fundatum extra Tolletanam urbem . . . Facta autem hac testamenti serie sub era millesimo cxxxiii [A.D. 1095] et noto die idus februarii. Ego Adefonsus, Dei gratia totius Ispanie Imperator, quod feci signo meo confirmo. Berta, Tolletani imperii Regina, quod dominus meus Rex fecit confirmo. Raimundus, gener Regis et totius Gallicie Comes, confirmo. Urracha, Regis germana, cum sobrina mea Urracha R[aimundi] Comitis uxore, confirmo. Henricus, gener Regis, cum uxore mea Tharasia, quod socer fecit confirmo. (Yepez, Chron. ord. S. Bened., tom. vi, append.; Cartul. of St. Victor at Marseille, edit. Guérard, no. 829.)

²³ De Gallicanis partibus, according to Roderic of Toledo. Ferreras (tom. iii, p. 297) calls her dau. of the Marquis of Este, Verona and Tuscany. As St. Marc observes, no person answering this description then existed. Beatrice may, indeed, have been related to the Countess Matilda, who then ruled in Tuscany. St. Marc elaborates a conjecture (addit. et corr. to tom. iii, p. xii) that she was dau. of the Marquis Fulco of Este. The parentages of Bertha and Beatrice seem to be confused together, and as far as I can see, nothing is known of either.

Sandoval (Hist. de los Reyes de Castilla y de Leon, f. 78) gives a charter:—Ego Adefonsus gratia Dei Hispaniarum Imperator, una cum conjugē mea Isabel Hispanie Regina . . . facta charta testamenti sub era 1145 [A.D. 1107], vii Kal. Jun. I find no other mention of this Isabel.

Alteram filiam, sed non conjugali thoro natam, Ainrico uni filiorum filio ejusdem Ducis Roberti dedit.

²⁵ The marriage is mentioned by the anonymous author of the gestes of the Counts of Barcelona. Also by William of Apulia:—

Partibus Esperie, quem Barcelona tremebat,
Venerat insignis Comes hanc Raymundus in urbem,
Ut nuptura Ducis detur sibi filia, poscit.

³² I here follow, in the matter of Humbert's parentage, St. Marc (Abr. Chron., tom. iii, pp. 623-633) who has convicted Guichenon of foisting two Counts, the Marquis Otto and another Amédée, into the list of the Counts of Savoy.

³³ He is styled in a charter to the Abbey of Cluny:—Dominus Umbertus nobilissimus Comes, qui cognominatus est Rinfortiatus.

³⁴ Necrology of St. Jean de Maurienne. Guichenon says he died in 1103, and others in 1099, 1109, 1113 or 1115.

³⁸ Her fifth and sixth regnal years both fell partly in 1119. (Cartulary of Notre-Dame at Paris, edit. Guérard, tom. i, pp. 256, 265.) Her seventh regnal year fell in 1122, according to a charter to St. Denis cited by Du Chesne.

⁴⁰ She was born in 1123 or 24:—Anno 1137, V idus Aprilis, quod tunc fuit in Parasæva, obiit Willelmus Palatinus comes Pictavorum, ultimus Dux Aquitanie, apud S. Jacobum in Galice, unicam filiam 13 annorum nomine Alienor, quam genuerat de sorore Vicecomitis de Castro Airau, et monarchiam Aquitanie relinquens Ludovico Francorum Regi, quam etiam idem desponsaverat. (Chron. Lemovic.) She died, not 26 June 1202, as is often stated, for she was living in 1203 (Charter to Ste. Radegonde at Poitiers, given in Besly's preuves, p. 497, and Archives of Niort, cited in L'Art de Vér. les Dates), but in 1204, 31 March (Calendar of Moutier-Neuf—Besly, preuves, p. 497), and was bur. at Fontevrault the 11th of April.

⁶ Orderic erroneously calls her dau. of a Count of Rochefort.

⁷ Anselme (tom. iii, p. 308) gives the version in the text, but all genealogies of Roucy, including Anselme's, make Adelaide dau. and hss. of Ebles, Count of Reims and Roucy, though the terms of Herman the monk of Laon, who wrote about 1150, and is the original authority on this subject, are expressly to the contrary:—Hilduinus Comes Rociensis duxit conjugem Adeladem, germanam domni Manasse Remorum Archiepiscopi, ex qua genuit septem filias . . . Secundam filiam duxit conjugem Rotholdus [Gaufredus] Comes Perticensis, de qua genuit . . . Julianam matrem Margarete Regine Navarensis. Again, he calls Manasses the Archbishop "avunculus" of Adelaide, another dau. of Count Hilduin. And two charters to St. Remi at Reims, printed by Du Chesne (M. de Chastillon, preuves, p. 16), shew that the Archbishop was son of Manasses Calvus, Remensis Vicedominus. The accepted pedigree of Roucy must, therefore, be amended in this particular. The dau. of Ebles was probably wife of Hilduin III, and mother of Hilduin IV.

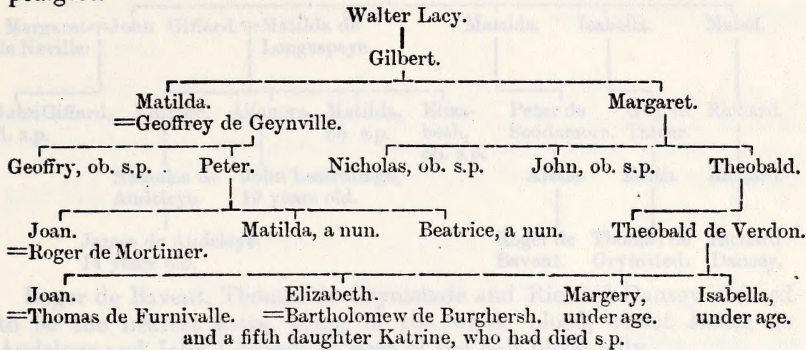

Pedigrees from the Plea Rolls.

By Major-General the Hon. GEORGE WROTTESELEY.

Coram Rege Roll. Trinity. 2. E. 3. m. 128.

Hibernia.—In a plea of Quo warranto respecting franchises claimed by Roger de Mortimer and Joan his wife in Trym the pleadings give this pedigree.

Coram Rege Roll. Hillary. 2. E. 3. m. 98.

Sussex.—Thomas de Breouse sued Alina, formerly wife of John de Moubray, for the manors of Grenestede, Wassington, and Fyndon, and gave this pedigree.

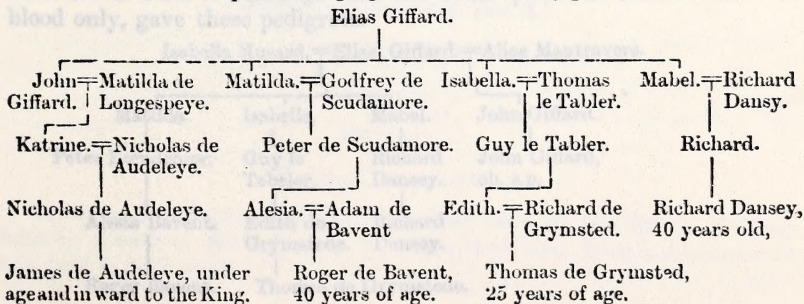

William de Breouse, lord of Brembre, 9 E. 1. = Mary.

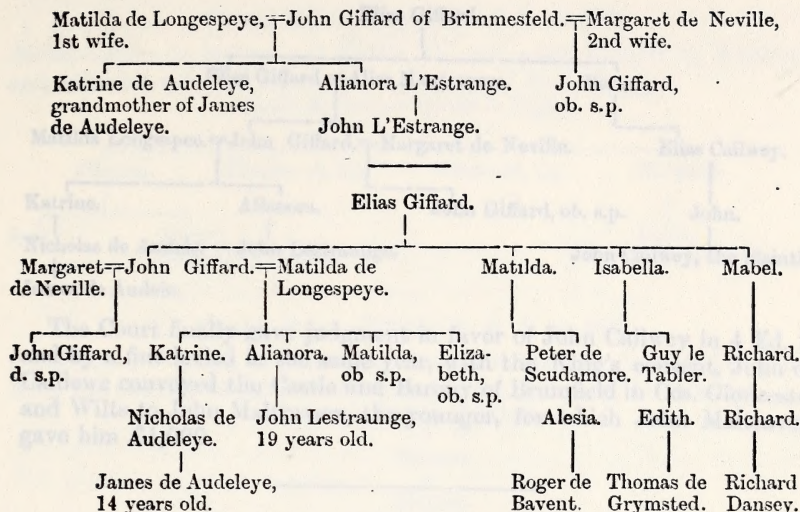

The process was continued till 5 E. 3, when it was shewn that Aline was dead, and the suit was dismissed.

Coram Rege. Mich. 1. E. 3. m. 119.

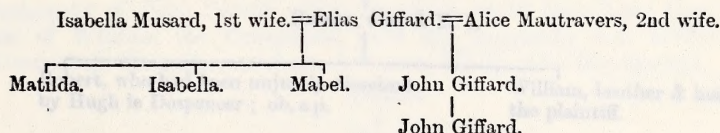

Glouc.—Wilts.—A suit to determine the nearest heirs of John Giffard of Brimsfield. The proceedings give the following pedigrees.

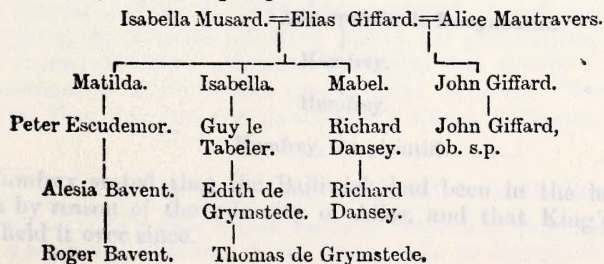

Roger de Bavent, Thomas de Grymstede and Richard Dansey claimed to be the nearest heirs, being of the whole blood, whilst James de Audeleye and John Lestraunge were of the half blood only.

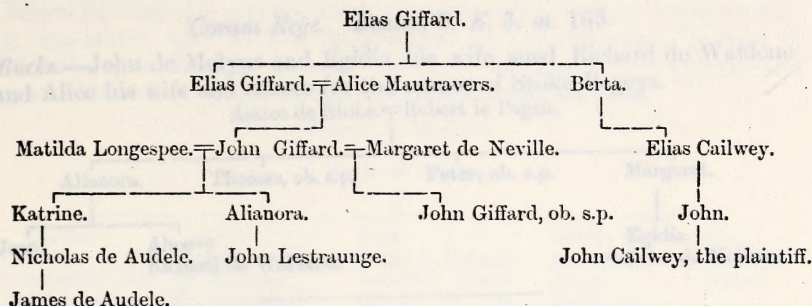

The King's attorney, however, who appeared for the King's wards James de Audley and John Lestrangle, claimed that they were the nearest heirs, and he gave the following pedigree to shew that the descendants of Matilda, Isabella, and Mabel were not of the whole blood.

The suit was then adjourned to the following Easter term.

At Easter term a new claimant appeared in the person of John Cailwey or Caillewe, who gave a descent from Elias Giffard, the father of the Elias Giffard of the last pedigree, and the jury found in his favor on the ground that he was of the whole blood whilst the other plaintiffs were of the half blood only, and the jury being required to shew why John son of Fulk le Straunge and the other plaintiffs were of the half blood only, gave these pedigrees.

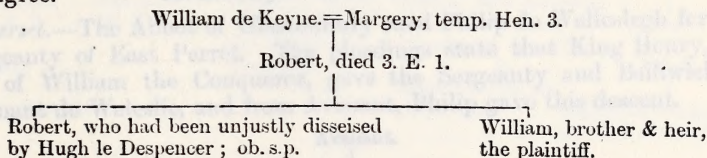

The Court finally gave judgment in favor of John Cailwey in 4 Ed. 3, and by a fine levied in the same year, with the King's consent, John de Cailwey conveyed the Castle and Barony of Brumfield in Cos. Gloucester and Wilts to John Maltravers, the younger, for which John Maltravers gave him £1,000.

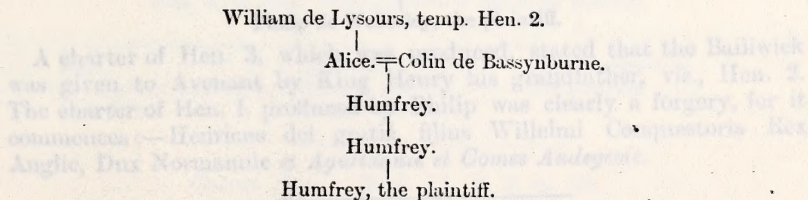

Coram Rege. Hillary. 5. E. 3. m. 38.

Coram Rege. Easter. 5. E. 3. m. 163.

Bucks.—John de Molyns and Egidia his wife sued Richard de Waldene and Alice his wife and others for the manor of Stoke Pogey.

Somerset.—The Abbot of Glastonbury sued Philip de Welleslegh for the Sergeanty of East Perret. The pleadings state that King Henry, the son of William the Conqueror, gave the Sergeanty and Bailiwick to Avenant de Weleslie, and from Avenant, Philip gave this descent.

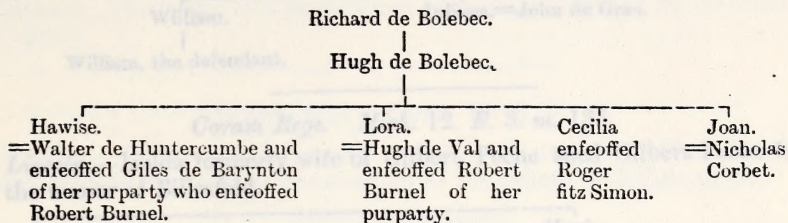

Philip de Wellesley, the plaintiff.

A charter of Hen. 3, which was produced, stated that the Bailiwick was given to Avenant by King Henry his grandfather, viz., Hen. 2. The charter of Hen. I. produced by Philip was clearly a forgery, for it commences:—Henricus dei gratiâ filius Willelmi Conquestoris Rex Anglie, Dux Normannie et Aquitannie et Comes Andegevie.

Leic.—John le Warre and Joan his wife sued Margaret formerly wife of Albert de Grelle (Greilly) for a third of the manor of Herdeby.

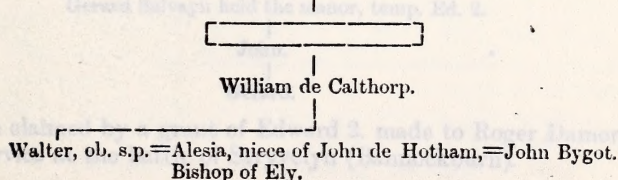

Margaret called to warranty William de Grelle.

N.B.—The plaintiff was the ancestor of the present Lord de la Warr, and married Joan the daughter and heir of Robert de Greilly, the Baron of Manchester. This Robert de Greilly represented a younger branch of the great house of de Grailly—Captal de Buch of Gascony—but the De la Warr pedigree styles him Robert de Gresley.

Norfolk.—Willam de Calthorp, Chivaler, sued John Bygot and Alesia his wife and others for the manor of Uppehall and he gave this descent.

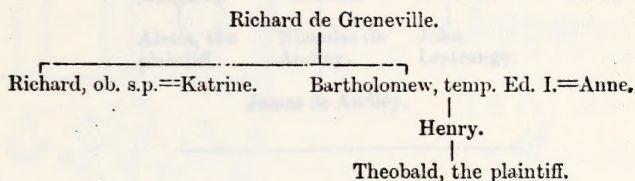

William de Calthorp, temp. Hen. 3, grandfather of the plaintiff.

It appears from the pleadings that in the will of Calthorp there were two manors called Kybaldhall and Uppehall: and Kybaldhall was called the manor of Calthorp and was held of the Honor of Gloucester and had been held from time out of memory by the ancestors of William de Calthorp. The manor of Uppehall was held of the Abbot of St. Benedict of Hulm.

Ebor.—Gerard Salvayn, Chivaler, sued Elizabeth formerly wife of Roger Damory for lands in Saltmerse and Skelton near Hovedon, known as the manor of Sandhalle, and gave this pedigree.

Gerard Salvayn held the manor, temp. Ed. 2.

Elizabeth claimed by a grant of Edward 2. made to Roger Damory for his good service at the battle of Stryvelyn (Bannockburn).

De Banco. Mich. 21. E. 3.

Notts.—Alesia de Lascy, Countess of Lincoln, sued Thomas le Bret, Chivaler, for the manor of Thornhagh which Matilda de Longespee her grandmother, and whose heir she was, had given to Richard le Bret and Amice his wife and to the heirs of their bodies, and which should revert to her, the issue of Richard and Amice having failed.

William de Longespee. = Matilda de Longespie, = John Giffard, second husband.

The Abbot stated that his right was derived from a grant of William Peverel, temp. Hen. I., and he produced the deed in Court and the jury found in his favor.

THE EARLDOM OF MEULAN.

Once again Mr. Round has tried to shelve a controversy by making a quotation from a modern “authority.” He seems to have taken out a patent for this summary method, though it has only once proved successful in a small way, when he quoted from something written by myself. Having now utterly failed to shake my conclusions on four principal subjects, one of which I took up as an “extra” to oblige him, he ought to be the last to use such outrageous expressions as he does towards me; but here also there are “exclusive rights.”

In the present case Mr. Round quotes himself as the final authority, using a casual opinion expressed by Mr. Eyton as a support. But although I produced fresh evidence on the matter in question in April, 1892, he has since made two pretended replies¹ without even referring to it. At the same time it has compelled him to shift his ground entirely.

Not for a moment can it be admitted that the Abingdon Chronicle is of less credibility than Orderic Vital, on whom Mr. Round “uncritically” relies. We have however no need to choose between them, as it can be shown that they are in practical agreement, but to do this I suppose I must take up still another extra subject, and I trust it will be for the common benefit.

Now I had no time to investigate original or even printed materials in the case of this Earldom, in the same manner as I did in respect of the Earldom of Lincoln, but I soon discovered that Mr. Round had not taken everything into consideration. He must therefore excuse me if I do not feel at all disposed to admit that his article in the “Dictionary of National Biography” is in any way exhaustive, and the more especially as it dismisses the present question in a hasty and superficial manner. Confronted by the difficulty of reconciling two stories, he chose to reject one of them entirely. This is no doubt a short and easy method, but it does not evince a large amount of ingenuity. He is only a bad workman who is for ever quarrelling with his tools.

As I have said before, my object in referring to this matter was partly to uphold Mr. Round's own contention that the Tewkesbury charter did not pass in 1116, as was supposed, though of course it is not my business to object to that date. The only other suitable date would be 1121; but, said Mr. Round, "Robert, Earl of Meulan," a witness thereto, was not then alive, and therefore the charter must be a forgery.¹

To this, knowing the uncertainty of titles at that period, I made the obvious objection that the reference might possibly be to the son of the same christian name. After the customary denunciations, he rejoined as follows :—

But he failed to remember that Robert was a boy at his father's death in 1118, and neither is, nor would be, spoken of as Earl of Leicester till a later date.

Naturally I took Mr. Round's contention to be that the second Robert was not known as Earl in 1121, the date really in question, and that therefore he could not have attested a royal charter in that year. Mr. Round clearly intended to suggest that Robert could not have been an Earl during his minority; and truly we may doubt whether he could have so attested during that period. But now, in obscurely attempting to correct my view of what he meant, he professes to explain (?) that while he supposes Robert to have been a boy of "fourteen" years in 1118, he does not insist that Robert was a boy in 1121; thus virtually admitting that the second Robert was an Earl in the latter year.

This is the very thing I was contending for, and so the question of age becomes immaterial to our dispute, though I shall discuss it fully further on. He however still clings to the notion that there was some period during which the brothers were not known as Earls, though he is compelled to whittle it down to the vanishing point.

But we are quite independent of Mr. Round's admission, to which indeed he was forced by the facts I brought forward. I need not here repeat what I have already written (viii. 208), but I must, for the sake of clearness, state that I have already proved two things of which he was not aware when he wrote his vaunted biographical sketch. One is, that the title of "Earl of Meulan" was in use immediately after the first Earl's death, and that consequently there was no such interval between that date and the accession of the twin-brothers as he assumes in the quotation above given. The other is, that the same title of "Earl of Meulan" was at first given to the second Robert, as well as to Waleran. Orderic, it may be added, begins to call the latter "Comes," as early as 1118; which shows that he knew nothing of the imaginary interval. Nor have I found any documentary evidence in favour of that notion.

That there was, on the other hand, some interval of time before the later titles were finally settled, is just what might have been expected, even if there were no proof whatever. In those early days, as I ascertained when inquiring about the Earldom of Lincoln, the all important thing was the personal title of Earl, and any further description was derived, as a rule, not from any County in which his lands lay, but from the principal Castle where he made his residence, which was significantly termed the caput honoris. Now, as the second Robert did not at first reside in England, it is easily intelligible that he would, for a time use his father's title jointly with his brother. The title of "Earl of Leicester" had never previously been in existence, as I shall have to show; and the double succession was a very uncommon event, which would cause some perplexity.

It may further be remembered that the first Earl had obtained the Leicester fiefs by artifice, keeping them in spite of his oath to restore them; and that he was strongly urged, on his death-bed, to surrender them to the rightful owner; but he referred it to his sons to make provision for his soul. Thus there may have been some hesitation in adopting the title, even on this ground. Henry of Huntingdon, however, speaks as if the heirs were at once able to act for themselves, for he says:—

Eo autem defuncto, filii ejus magis injuste congregata injuste studuerunt augere, quam aliquid pro salute paterna distribuere.

Far from being "at home in the subject," Mr. Round is clearly very much at sea in respect of the early history of this earldom. As he in fact insists on two separate and independent earldoms, it is not to be wondered at that he is so ready to believe in an immediate partition between the heirs. There was, however, no independent "earldom of Leicester" till after the first Earl's death; so if they were minors, as he assumes, there would be all the more reason for some delay before the new title of "Earl of Leicester" was settled upon.

In order to clear the ground, I may remark that it is not the correct thing for English writers to speak of a Comes who had large possessions both in England and Normandy as a "Count" rather than an "Earl." The rule, I take it, is the other way; yet Mr. Round professes to correct me in opposition to it. Several honours in England were known for centuries as being parcels of "earldoms" bearing French names.

But here again I presume he relies upon "authority," in this case Dr. Stubbs, who is not too clear on the subject. The learned historian seems to have been puzzled to know why William I. was "springing in giving Earldoms, and inclined to confine the title to those who were already Counts in Normandy or France." The explanation is that "Count" and "Earl" were considered to be identical, and that as the Conqueror brought over a sufficient supply he had no need to "create" many others. This is illustrated by Dr. Stubbs's own remarks:—

The Count of Meulan had considerable rights in Warwickshire, recorded in Domesday, but the Earldom was created for Henry, his brother, and he himself obtained the Earldom of Leicester in 1103.

The Earl of Meulan was already an Earl, and did not need re-creation; whereas his brother was not previously an Earl, and the dignity had to be conferred on him. Dr. Stubbs is, therefore, inaccurate in saying that "Robert of Meulan [and others] were Counts simply of French counties." Robert would not have given way to his younger brother if he himself had not already been looked upon as an Earl in England, especially as he had large possessions in the very same county of Warwick, which formed part of his earldom.

After this, I am not surprised to find that in his article on Robert de Beaumont, "Count" of Meulan, Mr. Round states his belief in a separate "creation" of the same person as "Earl of Leicester," without perceiving how absurd it was for the House of Lords' Committee, to whose Report he refers, to look for such a second creation. He even ventures to assert that the Earl of Meulan "is distinctly stated by Orderic to have been created Earl of Leicester." But this is an entire misunderstanding.

Being already a Comes, the first Robert, after taking possession of the town of Leicester, would take his place as president of the County Court without further ceremony. This view is in exact accordance with Orderic's own words:—

Consul de Mellento . . . callide intravit [urbem Leicestrie], et auxilio Regis, suaque calliditate totam sibi civitatem mancipavit, et inde consul in Anglia factus.

This may be understood in two ways: (1) "thereby," i.e. by this usurpation, "he became an Earl in England," which is objectionable; or rather (2) "he became Earl thereof,"¹ i.e. of the town of Leicester, the county not being mentioned. There is no hint of a fresh creation, nor was one necessary. "The King's aid" seems to have been confined to enabling him to subdue the city. The most that can be implied is that the Earl obtained a royal writ to the Sheriff to pay to him the third penny of the county.

This leads us to another point. Mr. Round suggests that there must have been a fresh "creation," because the Earl possessed "the third penny of the county." If this term meant, as might be supposed, a third part of the revenues of the county, no doubt a creation might have been presumed; but it can be shown that the proper interpretation is that the Earl received "the third penny" of the fines, amercements, and other perquisites or profits of the County Court, over which he presided, either really or nominally.² For this no grant may have been necessary. The payments to the Earl would follow as a matter of course. At most there would be a writ to the Sheriff to make such payments.

It may perhaps be asked how I get over the difficulty as to "the sword of the county." Now, as I have said before, I do not think it out of place in these pages to suggest a subject for discussion, and therefore I propound this query:—Ought we not rather to correct the above rendering of "gladius comitatus," and substitute for it "the sword of earldom?" I think Dr. Stubbs may help us here. He says:—

The dignity of an earl was conferred by special investiture, the girding on of the sword of the county by the King himself, and may be regarded as a personal rather than a territorial office, like knighthood itself.

If we change "the county" to "earldom," we get rid of a jarring note, and the whole statement is acceptable. Therefore I contend that, having been once girded with the sword of a Count in France, it was not necessary that Robert de Beaumont should be regirded with the sword of an Earl in England. The honor of Leicester was merely added to the Earldom of Meulan.

¹ Inde is equivalent to the French particle en, and may mean thereof, thereby, therein, therefrom, therefor, &c.

² See the two instructive writs referring to the Earl of Lincoln, enrolled on the Close Roll of 2 Henry III. (p. 355, a, b.) By the first, the Sheriff was ordered to pay him "the third penny of the moneys which shall arise from the pleas of the County [Court] of Lincoln." By the second, the Sheriff was ordered "to receive the clerk whom" the Earl "shall send to thee, to go with thee through the County of Lincoln, and to receive the third penny of the pleas of the County [Court], in the name of the Earl of Lincoln, to the use of the same Earl," &c. These writs would not have been necessary if the right had been maintained.

The fact is, the word comitatus had three meanings in early times: it variously signified (1) earldom, (2) county, (3) county-court. In the same manner hundredum and wapentagium frequently meant "hundred-court" and "wapentake-court." I have on a previous occasion shown how "the farm of a county" has been taken to mean that a certain "earldom" was at farm. As this kind of error seems to be spreading, it is as well to insist on its being such. A notable instance in point is the insertion of a brand-new earl, Henry Fitz-Earl, in the list of the Earls of Cornwall; the only authority being that he had "a grant of the County of Cornwall from King John to farm." This would merely make him Sheriff of the county, as, indeed, he is called.

With regard to the third meaning of comitatus, I do not find that it has been so explained by Dr. Stubbs. Had he fully grasped it, he might not have expressed the opinion that the first Norman earls had "great territorial jurisdictions" which were gradually reduced to "titular dignities"; a view quite at variance with the Reports on the Dignity of a Peer, and with Orderic's description of what took place at Leicester. Their influence was confined to the county court, and dwindled away as that tribunal became of less and less importance. Only the few earls palatine had territorial jurisdiction.

Though it is now a work of supererogation, it is worth while to inquire into the question of the age of the twin brothers. Their father fought at Hastings, and received vast estates in Warwickshire. He may not then have been very young, as his father was an aged man at the time. It seems strange, therefore, at the outset, that his marriage should be assigned to the year 1096, thirty years after his coming to England; but we must not take Orderic's dates too strictly.¹ His chronology is jerky and obscure, and he harks backwards and forwards without any warning. This must be conceded, whatever view we may take of the present case; and we have already seen that Mr. Round is not an immaculate authority in Orderic.²

Under the date of 1096, the chronicler writes as follows:—

Eodem anno Hugo, Crispeii Comes, Radulpho et Henrico filiis suis terram suam commisit, et Ysabel filiam suam Rodberto de Mellento Comiti dedit, et peregre proficiscens, secum nobile agmen Francorum adduxit.

This Hugh, Count of Crépi, was brother to Philip I., King of France. Mr. Round rashly puts the date of the marriage in "1096-7," but the French editor of Orderic more cautiously says, "about (vers) 1096." A man may go on pilgrimage, and give his lands to his sons at the shortest notice, but it is not so easy to dispose of a daughter in marriage. We may therefore suspect that if Orderic had been a more polished writer, he would have said "having previously given his daughter." It was his practice to bring together unconnected events, without regard to the date under which he appears to be writing, using the same past tense for all of them. The point is, that the marriage may have taken place some time before the year in which it is thus baldly recorded.

¹ This was written in May, 1893. We have since been told that there may have been a previous marriage. (See p. 2, ante.) In that case the argument in the text relates to the second marriage.

² Dr. Stubbs notices that Orderic refers to Bishop Odo's appointment as Earl of Kent under 1067, 1087, and 1088; and impugns his chronology in respect of Ralph Flambard.

This view is supported by another reference to the same marriage under the year 1102, where Orderic further specifies the issue of it, namely, the twin-sons Waleran and Robert, a third son Hugh the Poor, and five daughters. He gives no particulars as to the dates of their births, but it might be inferred that they had already taken place. Certainly he does not distinguish those, if any, which occurred afterwards, showing a disregard for dates which seems to be habitual. It is true that he also refers to something else which, we know, took place at a later date, but of this he gives no inkling.

There is yet another passage in Orderic on which Mr. Round solely relies, without making the slightest allusion to what has gone before. It occurs, apparently, under the year 1103, and refers to the birth of the twins as having occurred "in the year following." To this the French editor is obliged to add a note of explanation. But it can be shown aliunde that there are good reasons for being suspicious of his conjectural date "1104"; at the very least we are bound to insist on corroboration, especially as Orderic had already mentioned the same birth under an earlier date.

While, therefore, we may generally accept Orderic's historical facts, we must be constantly on our guard as to his chronology; and, moreover, it is not to be expected that he would be able to speak with the same certainty of the births of children as he does of the notorious facts of their after lives. It has even been shown that he is sometimes inaccurate in genealogical details.

On these grounds there is good reason to doubt whether Waleran and Robert were such juveniles as Mr. Round apparently wishes us to believe, though it is hard to reconcile his own views. To contemporaries, of course, they would seem young and inexperienced in comparison with their old and grey-bearded sire, a man of much experience and eloquence. Orderic himself shows, in contradiction of Mr. Round's view, that they were called Earls as soon as 1118; that they favoured the King against the rebels in Normandy in 1119, when they might inferentially have joined the other side if they had been so minded; and that in 1122 Count Waleran and others rebelled against their Sovereign, when the Count gave three of his sisters in marriage to confederates; and I have shown that one of them—or could they have acted jointly?—attested a Royal charter in 1119. Now, according to Mr. Round, the twins would have been only fifteen in 1119, and the redoubtable rebel would have been only eighteen in 1122! Yet if he is right in leading us to infer that they could not have been Earls till they attained their majority, they must, as they at once succeeded their father, have been born before 1097!¹

Thus it is obvious that the story told in the Abingdon Chronicle

cannot possibly be rejected. It serves as a useful corrective to Orderic, not indeed to his facts, but to the questionable dates of marriage and birth. It is always more easy to reject a story than to make two stories agree, but I think I have shown good reasons for their amalgamation.

The Abingdon narrative professes to be based on legal documents or proceedings, and indeed the writ to Earl Robert, empowering him to act as the King's Justice, is recited in full. The exact words of his declaration are worth quoting :—

Idem Comes plenum Henrici Regis tempore se testatus est vidisse mercatum ; et, quod ulterius est, cum adhuc puer esset, et apud Abendonam nutriretur Regis Willelmi tempore.

The obvious inference is, that Earl Robert had a distinct remembrance, as a man, of a market being held at Abingdon in the reign of Henry I., and that he even preserved a slight remembrance of it as a boy, or perhaps a child. The language appears to be wonderfully natural and and truthful on the face of it. He was probably taken "to see the market" when quite an infant; hence he does not put this early impression in the foreground of his allegation.

As "King William" is mentioned thus simply, the usual inference would be that William I. was intended, as the Editor of the Chronicle assumes. If it be necessary, we may stretch a point, and consider the reference to be to William II. Of this I was well aware, and actually made the suggestion in the first draft of my paper, but did not think it worth awhile to contradict the Editor; and moreover the matter at that time had ceased to occupy my attention, as Mr. Round had failed to reply to my remarks. Indeed, he seems to have hailed this further reference as a godsend.

It will be asked, how came the Earl to be so familiar with Abingdon? We may notice that Henry I., while Prince, had at least on one occasion resided in the abbey of Abingdon by command of his father. The abbey was a royal foundation, and it is likely that Earl Robert and his brother were educated in it. This helps to explain Orderic's statement that "the King had kindly brought up Waleran and Robert as if they were his own children," &c. As their father's married life was notoriously unhappy, it seems probable that the twin brothers were taken under the royal care long before his death, possibly by William II. in the first place.

On the whole, I think we are justified in placing the date of birth of the twin Earls at not later than 1097, the alternative date which Mr. Round himself unconsciously suggests. But it must be remembered that further light may still be thrown on the subject, as the manuscript materials are far from having been exhausted. Anyhow, the time has not yet arrived for "calling attention" to a "a strange blunder" in a trustworthy chronicle. To "point out error" is not the same thing as to prove it; of which truism some amusing illustrations may be seen under the bold heading, "Errors of Dugdale and the Genealogists," in the Topographer and Genealogist.

This discussion may be very interesting, but it is the merest by-play; ce n'est pas la guerre. Suppose it could be shown conclusively that the date of the Tewkesbury charter was not 1121; we should then have to inquire whether after all it might not be 1116; and even if this should fail, another explanation might be forthcoming. So far is Mr. Round from proving this supposed solitary instance to the discredit of early charters of inspeximus! Surely it is high time for him to leave these bye-paths and to proceed along the highways of our controversy, if he is able to do so, which I now have reason to doubt. At least he must admit that slap-dash criticism does not go far in settling matters such as these.

NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY OF EXELBY OF LONDON, HERTS, &c.,

DESCENDED FROM A BRANCH OF THE YORKSHIRE FAMILY OF THAT NAME.

By H. D. ESHELBY, F.S.A.

I think that the widow of Miles Exelby (I) married secondly one Richard Brewster, as the entry in the St. Dunstan's Register of the marriage on 23 May 1581 can hardly apply to anyone else.¹

To return now to the eldest son and heir of Miles Exelby (I).

William Exelby, born 1563. On the 9 Dec. 1587 he obtained the freedom of the Merchant Taylor's Company by servitude to William Salte,² who was one of his father's executors, and to whom he must have been bound in the year following his father's death. He held property in Hertfordshire, in 1592 is described as of Halstead, co.

¹ See St. Dunstan's Register, note ante. On 18 Oct. 1596 Richard Brewster, of New Inn, co. Midd., gent., by will nuncupative, left all his property to his brother John Brewster, of the Middle Temple, London, gent. (P.C.C. Drake 69). It seems probable that this was the same person, so that Alice had almost certainly died between 1581 and 1596. This John Brewster was secondary of the Fines Office and a prominent man in the parish of Stepney. For further information respecting him see "Memorials of Stepney," by Hill and Frere. In a marriage license 24 Sept. 1608 he is described as a widower, aged 56. There is a pedigree in Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. as follows:—

² He might apparently have taken up the freedom by patrimony, but did so by servitude, having been apprenticed. The early apprentice books of the Company before 1583 are, with others, lost. The following are extracts from the Freeman's books:—

William Exilbye made free by servitude to William Salte 9 Dec. 1587.

Richard Exilby made free by patrimony 22 March 1612.

John Exelby made free by patrimony 15 Jany. 1620.

William Exelby made free by patrimony 15 Feb. 1653.

Essex,¹ and about that date married Alice, daughter of . . . Walter.² In 1597³ he was of Northawc, co. Herts, and died at North Mimms in that county on the 10 Feb. 1618. His will is as follows:—

² He had acquired some of this property only a few years before his death, for on the 1 June [1616] he paid for pardon for alienation without the Royal licence of a messuage, garden, orchard, 80 acres of land, 16 acres of meadow, 26 acres of pasture, 5 acres of wood, &c., in the parish of St. Peter, St. Alban's. In the year 1610 one of the family appears to have got into trouble with the Parliament, for in the Index to the House of Commons Journal the following appears:—"Mr Exelby to be sent for for proceeding against a member notwithstanding an order of Privilege (p. 441). Examined and matter referred to Committee of Privilege (p. 442)." The information given is very meagre.

"House of Commons Journal 19 June 1610. Sir Robert Townshend. Order to send for Exelby being wilful contempt. Proceed notwithstanding the order. 20 June. Exelby brought in. Said he moved for an injunction. Affirmed, ad rejunyendum. Because Exelby not examined, referred to the Committees. To morrow morning."

William Exelby gent is son and heir aged 26 years at his father's death. (Chancery Inq. p.m. 16 Jas. I, Pt. ii, 136, London.)

This William left issue six sons and three daughters, viz., William Exelby, eldest son and heir; Richard, second son; John, third son; Miles, fourth son; Robert, fifth son; Peter, sixth and youngest son; Mary, eldest daughter; Alice, second; and Ellen, third and youngest.

William Exelby, the eldest son and heir, was of North Mimms and Sandridge, co. Herts, born circa 1592. He married about 1618 Elizabeth Peryent, youngest da. of Sir George Peryent, of Ayot Mountfitchett, co. Herts, Knt., and Martha, his wife, who was daughter of Sir John Boteler, of Watton, co. Herts, Kut. She was baptised 23 June 1596,¹ and died at Sandridge, co. Herts, on the 2nd or 5th August 1628,² a few days after the birth of her fourth daughter. Her husband survived her only four years, and died at North Mimms at the early age of 40 on the 16 Oct. 1632. He was buried, in accordance with the direction contained in his will, at Sandridge on the 23rd of the same month. He was among the Hertfordshire gentry who in 1625 were called upon by the King to contribute to a forced loan.³ Although entitled by patrimony to the freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company he apparently did not claim it. His will made in the month before his death runs as follows:—

In the name of God Amen. I William Exelby of North Mymms co Herts gent weak in bodie but of good and perfect memorie &c. To be buried in the parish church of Sandridge. Devises his messuage called Wixendens and all his lands in North Mymms to his well beloved brother John Exelby until such time as William Exelby son of the said John shall accomplish the age of 21 and then to him and his heirs male, in default to William Exelby now some of Myles Exelby my brother when he shall accomplish the age of 21 and to his heirs male, in default to my right heirs. ² The inq. p.m. of her husband says that she died on the 5th, but the Parish Register says 2nd. The following are some extracts from the Registers kindly supplied by the late Rev. J. Griffiths, LL.D., the Vicar:—

1626 Dec 31 Katharine the dau of Mr John Exelbie of London and Katharine his wife buried.

1628 Aug 2 Elizabetha uxor Guilielmi Exelby generosi sepulta.

1632 Oct 23 Willyam Exalbee gentelman beried leveing in North Mimes parishe (Sandridge Register).

The baptisms between 1618 and 1663 are torn out—but query if the Bishop's Transcripts would not supply some further particulars about the family.

³ Cussans' Herts—Hitchen Hundred, p. 160. In 1620 this William appears as defendant in some Chancery proceedings instituted by William Grubbe, of Nashide, St. Peter's, St. Alban's, arising upon a bond given by Grubbe to his father (William Exelby of the parish of North Mimms, gent.) upon which as executor he was suing at common law, but there is no genealogy in the documents. The said William Exelby by indenture 23rd January 1618 made between him and George Peryent of Ayot Mountfitchett knight and Elizabeth his daughter and Nicholas Trott of Eaton co. The said Elizabeth

¹ No doubt he was the John Westerman, who was Master of the Free School of St. Alban's, which office he resigned in 1626.

² Nathaniel String was Vicar of Ridge, about three miles from North Mimms, from 1618 to 1627.

⁴ This was Sir Nicholas Trott who was knighted by King James I. at Theobalds 19 July 1619. He married Mary, dau. of Sir George Peryent; was lord of the manor of Clothall and High Sheriff of Herts in 1608, in conjunction with Mary, his wife, he conveyed the manor, with the advowson of the rectory, by deed dated 1 June 1617, to William, first Earl of Salisbury. He also held the manor of St. Stephen's, Herts, until Nov. 1604, when he conveyed it to William Kentish yeo. He seems to have resided at Quickwood, where Chauncy says he built "a fair house." He was probably identical with the Nicholas Trott who was admitted to Gray's Inn in 1573. (Admission Reg. Foster.)

Exelby died at Sandridge 5 Aug 4 Chas I (1628). He made his will 27 Sept. 1632—here recited so far as relates to the properties. (Chancery Inq. p.m. 8 Chas. I., No. 26).

It will be seen that he left no male issue, and on the 15 Feb. 1632-3 the wardship of the four daughters was granted on the payment of 400 marks, to Robert Barley, Esq.,¹ and John Exelby,² the order states that their father died on the 16 October 1632, and the ages of the coheirresses are given as "Mary of the age of 13 years 9th Nov^r last, Elizabeth 11 years 20th May last, Frances 10 years 3rd July last, and Alice 4 years 31 July last, Wards to his Majesty whose lands are of the yearly value of £9. 6. 8." Although it is certain that if they have not been destroyed some of the records of the Court of Wards must contain later information about these daughters, I have been able to find further traces of only two of them, viz., Frances, the third, and Alice, the youngest. The former in 20 Chas. I. (1644-5) disposed of her share of the property left to her by her father to Thomas Foster, Esq. At that date she had married . . . Parker, and although then only about 22 was a widow.³ Alice, the youngest daughter, had married Thomas Scriven, gent., and apparently as soon as she came of age in 1649 sold the property left to her to Richard and Robert Barley.⁴

Richard Exelby, the second son of William, inherited a portion of the Chancery Lane property, together with the estate called Wixendens in North Mimms; the former he sold in 1622, being then described as of Sandridge.⁵ In or before that year he married Ellen . . . He sold the Wixendens estate in 1630 to his elder brother William, and was at that time described as of Ardley, co. Essex.⁶ He took up the freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company, to which he was entitled by patrimony, on the 22 March 1612. On the 13 Nov. 1632 a license was issued by the Bishop of London for the marriage at St. Martin's, Ludgate, of Richard Exelby, gent., of Malden, co. Essex, widower, aged 40, and Mary Edwin, of St. Giles', Cripplegate, aged 20, widow of Martin Edwin, deceased. (Harl. Soc., Vol. 25-26.) It is possible that he may be identified with Richard Exelby, of the parish of Holy Trinity, Minorities, City of London, of whose estate administration was granted on the 10 Oct. 1638 to John Picknutt during the minority of Richard, the son of deceased. AN ORDINARY OF SCOTTISH ARMS. By James Balfour Paul, Lyon King of Arms. Edinburgh (William Green & Sons). 8vo.

More than ordinary importance attaches to the issue of this volume, from the pen of Lyon King of Arms, as it contains the blazon of all the arms to be found upon record in the sister kingdom. The arrangement adopted is similar to Papworth's "Ordinary of British Armorial," but with an index of names, which that work unfortunately lacks. In Mr. Paul's introduction we are given a short history of the registration of these arms, from which it may be noted that the earliest Scottish armorial in existence is the register of Sir David Lindsay of the Mount, prepared about the year 1542, and that at the period of the Restoration this register was the only official armorial record extant. With the exception therefore of this one by Lindsay, the register of arms in Scotland dates from 1672, at which date the then Lyon commenced the register book entitled, "The Principall Authentick and Generall Register of the Armes in Scotland collected, visited, distinguished and authorized be the Honourable Sr. Charles Areskine of Cambo, Knight and Baronet," &c. Records of earlier date than 1672 no doubt existed at one time, but there is no evidence to prove this, but it is generally supposed that they were either lost at sea or in a fire which took place about 1670. What emphasizes the probability of the disappearance of other, besides the present records is the absence of the arms of many well known families of undoubted ancient lineage. Among the arms on record is a coat, to which Lyon refers in his preface, the loss of which would have been a matter at which to rejoice. On the 9th of July 1812, art we presume being on that day at its lowest ebb, Thomson Bonar of co. Kent was granted the following arms which would have delighted the heart of Tom Hood, viz. :—Arg. a saltire and chief az., the last charged with a dexter hand ppr., vested with a shirt sleeve arg. issuing from the dexter chief point, holding a shoulder of mutton ppr. to a lion passant or, all within a bordure gu. The shoulder of mutton we suppose was cooked, otherwise the lion should have been rampant. Such a specimen of imbecility we hope is unique.

This volume, as we have said, is one of great importance, and sets an example which might well be followed by England and Ireland.

ADMISSIONS TO THE COLLEGE OF ST JOHN THE EVANGELIST IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE. Parts I and II. Jan. 16 $\frac{2}{3}$ $\frac{9}{10}$ —July 1715. Edited by Rev. John E. B. Mayor. Cambridge (Deighton, Bell & Co.). 8vo.

Admissions to the Colleges of our Universities are so necessary to biographers and genealogists that it is surprising so few have been printed. Those of about half a dozen Oxford Colleges have appeared, but Cambridge can boast of but two only. Eleven years ago the first part of this present volume was published, and in the interval Dr. Venn has published the Admission register of Gonville and Caius. To transcribe and print the remaining registers would not take long, and notes as in this volume could be added later. It is no doubt owing to the collection of notes, which are of the greatest interest and value, that the second part of this Register, now issued together with the first, has been delayed for so many years. By the way, we do not see that the notes are included in the indexes, which is a pity, otherwise the indexes are most carefully arranged, consisting of Persons, Places, Trades, and Schools. The place names must have given the Editor some considerable trouble, as there are so many various spellings. Some are yet to be identified. The names of distinguished men are of course numerous as might be expected, and it is this fact which should hasten the publication of other similar registers.

THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE LIBRARY. English Topography, Part IV. Edited by George Laurence Gomme, F.S.A. London: (Elliot Stock) 8vo.

The fourth volume of this useful series is quite as interesting as its predecessors. The counties treated of are Durham, Essex, and Gloucester. The first of these did not receive so much attention as the other two, owing no doubt to its being at a greater distance from the Metropolis. In 1779 Mr. T. White communicated to the "Gentleman's Magazine" a paper, a little gruesome perhaps, but worth noting, on the discovery of the remains of a Knight Templar in the Church of Danbury. His body appears to have been preserved in a "pickle" which the enthusiastic Mr. White, never having "possessed the sense of smelling," tasted to ascertain its flavour. There are other references to the Knights Templars such as specimens of the accounts of the custodians of their manor of Hanningfield. A letter from the Bishop of Durham to his Secretary, Mr. Miles Stapylton, in 1661, is also to be found in this volume. An account of the market town of Mitcheldean contains some interesting matter, such as the asserting by the inhabitants of "their right to common, of pasture, herbage and pawnage, estovers, house-boot, hey-boot, and fire-boot, and liberty to dig stone . . . paying yearly to His Majesty's Exchequer the yearly rent of one penny, called swine silver or herbage money, and one penny, called smoke penny or mark money, for every house." Mr. Gomme's judgment in his selections could not be better, the result being a very charming volume.

HOW TO DECIPHER AND STUDY OLD DOCUMENTS. By E. E. Thoyts. London (Elliot Stock). Cr. 8vo.

Dear Mr. Editor,

As a student who has recently taken up the art and mystery of deciphering early documents, I have been reading Miss Thoyts' little book and think that perhaps you may like to hear how far it has guided me in my labours. It startled me a good deal to read that "a knowledge of Latin is unnecessary for ordinary antiquarian research," and feel sure that had I been quite ignorant of the language in which nearly all our old deeds at home are written, the difficulties that beset my path at the outset would have been increased a hundred fold. I do not either understand why the best method to learn Court-hand is to study Short-hand, as the latter seems to be so difficult as compared to Court-hand, which I have had little trouble in mastering with the aid of Wright's "Court-hand Restored." Contracted words are certainly very puzzling although Miss Thoyts says they are "the true alphabet for beginners." This sounds curious and may be quite true, but I found it much easier to begin at the other end of the stick. In the chapter on Parish Registers there seems to be a misprint, as I am sure it must cost more than from £3 to £10 to print some of these Registers. It was only the other day I was shown one which had over 500 burials entered in one month, and then there is Mr. Hallen's transcript of St. Botolph's which must have cost more than £10. I like the chapter on "Law Technicalities" which has proved of great service to me, also the one which gives the names of books on Paecography, some of which, I think, will really teach one to "decipher old documents." I wonder why the illustrations are reductions of early writing. It would have been so much better if they had been enlargements. To read them at all you will find it necessary to use a magnifying glass, but perhaps you have already tried.

I am, &c.,

A BEGINNER.

"THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE, AND WORDS THAT BURN," FROM THE WRITINGS OF FRANCIS BACON. Selected by Alexander B. Grosart. London (Elliot Stock). 16mo.

The third volume of the—in every way excellent—Elizabethan Library has been received. The author from whose works selections have this time been made is Francis Bacon. These have by no means been made at random. Mr. Grosart, as he tells us in his somewhat quaint introduction, has had no easy task in making selections from writings which are so uniformly pithy, original, and sterling, as those of his author. The plan which Mr. Grosart has adopted is to quote more fully from the less accessible works, and so to arrange that the greatness of Bacon's mind shall be illustrated: and the correctness of his conclusions on more doubtful subjects may be gauged by their soundness and evidence of perspicacity on others. Thus, his estimate of the greatness of Queen Elizabeth, a contemporary of his own, may be more safely trusted when we see with what ability he seizes on the points in the character of Alexander which really made him Great. Mr. Grosart's selections are as good as a lecture, and far better than a commentary on the Works of Francis Bacon.

Notes and Queries.

D'EVREUX GRANTS TO ST. PETER'S OF GLOUCESTER.—Among the original deeds at Gloucester, extracts from which have already appeared in this magazine (vol. ix., p. 189), is a charter of confirmation dated 1086, by which "Willms de Everous dedit 1 hid' t're in Eerchenfeld [Archenfield, co. Hereford] Westone [probably Weston under Penyard near Ross] et decimas de Hayterop [Hatherop, co. Glouc.] temp'e Serlonis Abb's."

CURIOUS ENTRY IN A PARISH REGISTER.—In the Parish Register of Bermondsey occurs the following record of a marriage:—"1624, Jan. 4, James Heriott Esquire and Elizabeth Josey gent.," with this curious note in the margin:—"This James Herryot was one of ye 40th children of his father a Scotchman."

THE PARENTAGE AND MARRIAGE OF SIR ROBERT CARR, OF ETAL.—I believe that I am now able to answer these questions which I raised in

The Genealogist for April, 1891, hoping to get assistance from some of those Genealogists who, at one time, were much interested in the discussion. It had long been concluded that the wife of Sir Robert Carr, of Etal, was a daughter of Thomas Carr, of Ford; the evidence being found in the facts that Sir Robert is called his "son-in-law," and that Sir Robert's son, William, speaks of Thomas Carr as his father's "father-in-law." It was, however, shewn by Mr. W. B. Thomas, in an article in The Genealogist, October, 1889 ("Descent of Smart, of Trehitt, Northumberland"), that if Sir Robert were Thomas Carr's son-in-law in the modern acceptation of the term, he must have married Elizabeth or Susannah, daughters of Thomas Carr by his first wife, Isabella, daughter of Sir John Selby. It appears, however, from "Carr v. Carr" (Collins, 173) that the name of Sir Robert's wife was Margaret, and she was living in 1673, and it is probable that she is the Margaret of whom Hodgson speaks when he says that "the sequestered estate of Etal was restored to Mrs. Margaret Carr and William Carr in 1653"; and this the more so that it is for his wife and children that, in 1652, he petitions the Commissioners to enforce the payment to him of the rents, &c., of Etal. (Royal Composition Papers, 1 Series, Vol. 22, p. 218). Another petition, dated 1 June, 1654 (1 Series 13, 222), mentions his disputes as to tenths, "now in controversy between him and one Thomas Carr, of Ford." And again, Margaret Carr (Boscawen) only became Sir William's wife in the previous year. A question arises as to who Sir Robert's wife was. His son, William, in his will, 22 June 1687, proved 1689, mentions his sisters Katherine and Margaret Carr, his brother Gilbert Carr, and his aunt Mary Partridge, his good friends (relations ?), Sir William Carr, of Greenhead, Bart., and Mr. John Carr, of Froyden (Scotland); he desires his "Aunt Mary Partridge to have all she needs"; and expresses his wish that Sir Andrew Kerr, of Greenhead, be the supervisor, the executor being William Carr, of Esbet, the elder. Thomas Bonner, Mayor of Newcastle, speaks of his sister, Mary Partridge. This points to the probability that Margaret, Lady Carr, of Etal's maiden name was Bonner. Thomas Bonner's is the sole signatory to the document of 5 Nov., 1652, which restores to Robert Carr the right and title to Etal, he having "satisfied his fine." It was Sir Robert's grandson, Sir William Carr, of Etal (father of Isabella, Countess of Errol), who, upon the death of Sir William Ker, of Greenhead, claimed the Baronetcy—all of which goes to show that Sir Robert was the son of William Ker, of Greenhead, by his wife Jane, who afterwards married Thomas Carr, of Ford Castle, when her sons by her first husband became stepsons-in-law to Thomas Carr; as was suggested in my article in The Genealogist for January, 1892.

Finally, Sir Robert's Seal of Arms (1665) is identical with the Coat registered in Scotland by Carr of Greenhead in 1670.

With reference to the question concerning the Arms granted (correctly or not) to Errol on marriage with the senior co-heiress of Carr of Etal, the Coat was "Gu., on a chev. ar., 3 mullets of the field.

I have not recapitulated the evidence published in former copies of the Genealogist.

GREGORY SMART.

THE EARLDOMS OF DOUGLAS AND MAR.

In January, 1893, Mr. J. H. Round concluded an article on "Janet Barclay" with the statement that he was "quite prepared to criticise and rebut some of the evidence bearing on the titles of Douglas and Mar." I accepted his challenge, and in reference thereto he has published an article in the October number of the Genealogist, attacking not the Earldoms of Douglas and Mar (as to which, except in one sentence, he says nothing at all), but attacking the accuracy of myself and the late Mr. Burnett, acting as counsel and witness in 1885. He says, in effect, that evidence was then given, respecting the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland, at variance with the records themselves; and that Mr. Burnett's opinions or inferences stated in 1885 differed from the opinions which he had expressed as Editor of these Rolls.

The first ground for this indictment, stated on page 65 of the Genealogist, turns out on examination to rest on a mistake in the Index to vol. iii of the Rolls. There an entry is indexed under Isabel, Countess of Douglas, which anyone who consults the entry, with the assistance of later knowledge, can see should have been indexed under Margaret, Countess of Douglas and Mar.

Then follows a quotation from the present Lyon King of Arms, writing in the Scottish Review, shewing that he and Mr. Grant (Carrick Pursuivant) spoke of a person as Earl of Douglas and Mar who has been proved to have been Earl of Douglas only.

A long quotation is given from Mr. Burnett's evidence to show that he spoke of certain entries as the first relating to certain persons, whereas they were not the first, the reason being that Mr. Burnett was speaking of the entries of names, and not of references. On page 67 the indictment is brought to a head with reference to Isabella, who is stated by Mr. Burnett to be first named in an account of 1404-5, while Mr. Round finds her mentioned fifteen years earlier. So she was mentioned, but not by name. Whereas Mr. Burnett was giving evidence as to the use of a style or designation.

Further quotations are given from the Minutes of 1885 for the purpose of describing the Act "by which 'Mr. Goodeve Erskine' became Earl of Mar" as founded upon evidence "loosely given;" the innuendo being of course that the Preamble of that Act was not properly proved, and that "Mr. Goodeve Erskine" was not previously Earl of Mar. Surely an attack on my accuracy, or on that of the late Mr. Burnett, even if Mr. Round made out his case, is hardly worth all this labour. If Mr. Round wishes the readers of the Genealogist to believe that the Select Committee of the House of Lords—one of the strongest in respect of legal knowledge that ever sat on a peerage case—had false evidence foisted upon them, and were led to a wrong conclusion, why does he not say so in express words? And if he means less than that what is the value of his article? On page 68 appears the only sentence which can lead the reader to any perception of a definite proposition. "Not till she appears on the Rolls as the wife of her second husband is she styled Countess of Mar." (This fact was stated by Mr. Burnett to the Committee.) I infer from this passage that Mr. Round still believes in the exploded myth that Countess Isabella was Countess only as the wife of a created Earl, but this loudly-trumpeted "onslaught" does not formulate that proposition.

Were it not for the great reputation which Mr. Round has deservedly acquired, I should scarcely have cared to reply; for whatever proposition I prove or disprove, I may be told was not the proposition asserted or denied by my critic.

The question being considered by the Select Committee, in reference to which Mr. Burnett and I are alleged by Mr. Round to have been inaccurate, was whether Isabella, Countess of Mar, was or was not Countess by inheritance, and the fact that 791 folio pages of evidence other than the Minutes quoted by Mr. Round, were before the Committee, in respect of this and other points of the case is studiously ignored.

True, Countess Isabella was not so described by name in the Rolls before her second marriage, for the simple reason that before the occasion referred to she was not the person who gave the Customars a receipt. But she was conclusively proved by other evidence to have been Countess of Mar not later than 1397, her second marriage occurring in 1404. The facts have been so often discussed in the pages of the Genealogist, and the argument is so well known to all who take an interest in the Mar claims, that I feel some apology to be due from me if I say more. In respect of the critical point in the history, that which relates to the Douglas tenure of the Earldom of Mar, I can discover no inaccuracy in the evidence, while every reference given by Mr. Round agrees exactly with the Erskine claim. The Rolls, which he quotes, and in respect of which he finds that Mr. Burnett thought differently at one time to that which he thought when better informed, are all consistent. Sir Malcolm Drummond receives a pension to which he was entitled in right of his wife as the heir of her brother; and gives a receipt. This goes on for several years, and then, he being dead, his widow in respect of another pension (which belonged to him in his own right), gives her receipt for terce, and, having then to be described by her proper name, is described as Isabella, Countess of Mar. This is not the first evidence of being Countess, nor would it be satisfactory evidence of anything but reputation. If Isabella became Countess of Mar by inheritance, she became so soon after 1391, if, as seems probable, her mother then died. The documents applicable to these years are few, but they are consistent. She was spoken of by the Sovereign and by subjects as Countess for years before her second marriage, and she granted her marriage charters, to Sir Alex Stuart, as Countess. Mr. Round's reference to my argument upon Sir Malcolm of Drummond does not seem to me fair (p. 68). I never asserted that Sir Malcolm was not Earl of Mar, and therefore, &c. On the contrary, I hinted that he might have been Earl, and I was certainly of opinion and am so still, that the use of the word Dominus by the grantor of a territorial charter does not disprove his being an Earl. But I argued if I am wrong, and if the documents do negative the proposition that Drummond was Earl, then it cannot be said that Isabella was Countess as his wife. She was Countess before her second marriage. Therefore she was Countess by inheritance. As it is clear, I may add, that Isabella de Douglas married Malcolm de Drummond before Countess Margaret's death, the succession to the dignity could only have occurred after the first of the entries in the Rolls, the purport of which was so "loosely" stated to the Committee.

Mr. Round's comparison (p. 66) between my statement that the Earl of Douglas was called of Mar, and Mr. Burnett's statement that the Earls of Douglas were never called of Mar is preposterous. I was arguing on the charter evidence already before the Committee—Mr. Burnett was giving new evidence from the Rolls only.

The above remarks suffice to indicate that any suggestion to the effect that the Committee of 1885 were misled by any misconduct or inaccuracy on the part of either myself or Mr. Burnett, is quite unjustifiable.

If Mr. Round desires to attack the Earldom of Mar on its merits I shall be happy to meet him, but I respectfully decline to contend any more against occasional attacks on the accuracy of any expression used by me or Mr. Burnett. The Act for the Restoration of the Earldom of Mar was passed on proof of the Preamble, not on the authority of Messrs. Burnett and Lindsay, but on a report from the Lord Chancellor (Halsbury), the Earl of Selborne, Lords Blackburn, Watson, and Fitzgerald. (Lords Coleridge and Bramwell being also members of the Committee, but absent.) As the principal point proved before the Committee was the existence of an ancient Earldom descendible to females, of which the Earl of Mar is heir. Mr. Round will find it hard to convince the readers of the Genealogist that these distinguished Judges were wrong,¹ but unless he is prepared so to contend the discussion is not worth continuing.

W. A. LINDSAY.

ROBERT, EARL OF LEICESTER.

It would not be necessary to reply to Mr. Kirk if he had merely covered his retreat by miscellaneous braggadocio; but when he endeavours to brazen out his blunders by rejecting the historical facts and dates which convict him of having blundered, he cannot be allowed to alter history for his own convenience.

I might content myself with referring our readers to Mr. Watson's learned article, with which this volume of the Genealogist opened. I have not the pleasure of Mr. Watson's acquaintance; and he wrote quite independently of any controversy. But his masterly article stated the facts precisely as I have stated them.

The two points in dispute are so exceedingly simple that I need not occupy, like Mr. Kirk, some eight pages in raising a cloud of dust in which everything is lost to sight.

¹ The Committee would have been unanimous but for the dissent of the Earl of Redesdale

FIRST POINT.

Mr. Kirk, finding it difficult to defend the authenticity of the Tewkesbury Charter as a document of 1116, made the despairing suggestion that "it may have been of later date, say 1121, when the King was at Winchester . . . Till this point is settled, why talk of forgery?"¹

Well, I "settled" it at once by shewing that Robert, the great Count of Meulan, who is among its witnesses, died June 5, 1118,² so that he could not have witnessed a charter in 1121.

Robert, Count of Meulan,
d. June 5, 1118.

Waleran, Count of Meulan,
born 1104.

Robert ("le Bossu"), Earl of Leicester, born 1104.

This descent is well ascertained and beyond dispute.

But Mr. Kirk, finding himself in a "corner," tried to break through and escape by the wild suggestion that Robert "le Bossu" might have adopted his brother's title of Count of Meulan³ when witnessing a charter in 1121. Round this point he has guessed and guessed; but what evidence has he produced for so wild a conjecture? Absolutely none. His 1121 suggestion is left without a leg to stand on.⁴

SECOND POINT.

I stated that "Robert [Le Bossu] was a boy at his father's death" [1118].⁵ Mr. Kirk retorted, with much triumph:—

"So far from Robert, Earl of Meulan, or Leicester, having been a 'boy' in 1121 (sic), he himself claimed to have been brought up at Abingdon in the days of William I.⁶ (sic)!"

I at once shewed that Mr. Kirk had fallen into a notorious trap, that the dates of Robert's birth (1104) and his parents' marriage were well-known, and that they utterly demolished the idea of his having been "brought up" in the days of William the Conqueror.⁷

Replying now at great length,⁸ Mr. Kirk finds himself reduced to impugning the only definite evidence we have as to the date of Robert's birth, evidence of which, I shall shew, there is ample confirmation. It is admitted, on all hands, that Orderic states the birth of the twin-brothers, Waleran and Robert, to have taken place in 1104. He does not, as Mr. Kirk tries to imply,⁹ assign that event to any other year.

³ See ante, p. 3.

⁴ It is not the case that Roger of Wendover, as alleged (viii, 208), styles Robert "le Bossu," Count of Meulan. Even if he did, his evidence would be valueless, as he wrote much later. But all that he does is, in describing the rising of Waleran, Count of Meulan, against Henry I (and even his part in the battle of Lincoln, 1141), to style him Robert (instead of Waleran) by a slip. The passages have nothing to do with Robert "le Bossu."

⁵ N.S., viii, 93.

⁶ N.S., ix, 138.

⁷ N.S., ix, 219.

⁸ N.S., x, 109-116.

⁹ Ante, p. 114.

Let us see how far this date agrees with the contemporary evidence. How are Robert and his brother spoken of after their father's death (1118) when, according to me, they were "boys," and according to Mr. Kirk, young men, of at least one and twenty?¹

The first passage I shall quote is taken from Orderic, with Mr. Kirk's garbled paraphrase, convicting him, by its side :—

Ipsæ rex [Henry I] filios Rodberti, comitis Mellenti . . . post mortem patris, ut propriam sobolem dulciter educavit.

"This helps to explain Orderic's statement . . . it seems probable that the twin brothers were taken under the royal care long before his [their father's] death, possibly by William II in the first place" (ante, p. 115).

This is how evidence is treated by Mr. Kirk, and how he "proves" his guesses against me. Here is the second passage, 1119 :—

"Imberbes quoque filii Rodberti consulis de Mellento, Gualerannus et Rodbertus regi adharebant."

"Imberbes," if born in 1104, not if born "not later than 1097."

The third passage is taken from William of Malmesbury, who was, like Orderic, a strictly contemporary writer. Mr. Kirk, from his silence, seems never to have heard of it. It refers to November, 1119.

"filios comitis de Mellento ut contra cardinales de dialectica disputarent subornavit [Rex Henricus] . . . Horum puerorum pater erat Comes de Mellento Robertus."

"Pueri," if aged fifteen, as I maintain; not if aged twenty-two at least, as Mr. Kirk would have us believe.

Let it be remembered that 1104 is the only definite date given us, that there is no evidence against it, and that Mr. Kirk only assails it because it is fatal to a casual statement in a monkish story. Having been imposed upon by this statement, he now feels bound to uphold it at the cost of rejecting the whole of our direct contemporary evidence.²

I may add that, in addition to the above evidence, there is further evidence known to me which I could produce, if necessary, of Waleran's youthful age at his father's death.

And now let me show that in attempting to refute me, Mr. Kirk, as usual, comes to fresh grief. He reminds one of the man of whom it was said that he could not open his mouth without putting his foot in it.

Mr. Kirk writes of the twins :—

"I have shewn that one of them—or could they have acted jointly?—attested a Royal charter in 1119."³

The discovery thus proudly referred to was this :—

"in a royal charter of the year 1119, and in another dated between 1119 and 1123, 'the Earl of Meulan' appears as a witness." (These charters will be found in Mr. Hart and Mr. Lyons' edition of Ramsey Cartulary, i, 244, 245)."⁴

¹ "We are justified in placing the date of birth of the twin Earls at not later than 1097" (ante, p. 115).

² Reference to p. 115 ante, will shew that Mr. Kirk has had to drop the interpretation of "King William" as the Conqueror, magnificently observing that he "did not think it worth awhile" to distinguish between him and his son.

Now, putting aside the wild suggestion of the twins acting as "two single gentlemen rolled into one," we find that no date is mentioned in these charters. Mr. Kirk has hastily accepted those assigned them by the editors without noticing that they passed in England (at "Burnham"). Now the King was out of England from Easter 1116 till the close of 1120, so that the charter appealed to by Mr. Kirk cannot possibly belong to 1119. Thus another of his pompous discoveries goes by the board.

But I must follow the matter out. The editors clearly got their limit from the fact that Herbert, Bishop of Norwich, died June 22, 1119. So he did. But this only proves that, being granted in England, the charter (clxviii) must be previous to the King's departure just after Easter, 1116. Consequently, the attesting witness was neither of the twins, but simply their great father, Count Robert himself! The charter of 1119-1123 (clxix) is not in question, but I may as well observe that it clearly belongs to the same occasion as the preceding.

Here I digress for a moment to explain that the charter appointing Reinald, Abbot of Ramsey (pp. 240) though assigned by the editors to "1114-1119," must, in the same way, be previous to the King's departure in 1116, for it passed at Thetford, and mentions Bishop Herbert of Norwich. This is an important chronological correction.

Having shewn, in spite of Mr. Kirk's bluster, that my own position is unassailable, I will sum up briefly the latest inaccuracies on the strength of which he has endeavoured to assail it. (1) It is not the case that "the title of 'Earl of Meulan' was at first given to the second Robert, as well as to Waleran" (x, 110), and Mr. Kirk has failed to adduce one scrap of evidence for this contention. (2) It is not the case that the second Robert was called an earl by Orderic ("in contradiction of" my views) in 1118 (x, 114); he is not so styled, as a matter of fact, by him till 1135. (3) It is not the case that either of the twins witnessed a charter to Ramsey in 1119. (4) It is not the case that any date of birth is assigned to them but 1104. (5) It is not the case that Robert the second is styled "Count of Meulan by Roger of Wendover" (viii, 208). (6) It is not the case that I style him a boy "in 1121."

These are not matters of opinion: they are all matters of fact. May one not once more suggest to Mr. Kirk that it would be wiser for his own genealogical reputation to desist from a controversy of which each stage does but illustrate further his curious ignorance of Anglo-Norman genealogy.

E. [She m. 2, 1213-4, Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex, who d. in 1216.]

² We are told by William of Malmesbury that Hamon-aux-dents (who fell at the battle of Val-des-Dunes in 1047, in arms against Duke William) was grandfather of Robert fitz Hamon, Lord of Gloucester. It is a mere conjecture that the latter was son of Hamon the Dapifer. But I notice that (1) Hamon-aux-dents is described as having been dapifer to Duke Robert the Magnificent, (2) Robert Earl of Gloucester possessed Leeds Castle in Kent. (Ord. Vital., l. xiii, c. 37.)

³ According to the continuator of William of Jumièges, he was son of Hugh de Montgomery, by Josceline the sister of Humphrey de Vieilles. Nevertheless, as Mr. Stapleton remarks (Rot. Norm., vol. i, p. 75), his father was named Roger. In a charter (Cartul. of Troarn, f. 1—Arch. du Calvados) Roger the son calls himself :—Ego Rogerius ex Northmannis Northmannus, magni autem Rogerii filius. I further observe that this charter is dated the second year of the reign of William in England, the King's confirmation charter bearing the same date. Yet the donor's gift is made :—pro redemptione anime mee et parentum meorum et precipue uxoris mee Mabilie nuper defuncte ; while, according to the historians, Mabel was murdered in Dec. 1082. Josceline was perhaps wife of Hugh, eldest son of the first Roger.

⁴ It has been shewn by Mr. Stapleton that Earl Roger was a comes by reason of his English possessions only. Contemporary writers call him Earl of Shrewsbury, from the caput of the honour, in accordance with a common French custom, which was followed in England. Thus the Counts of Champagne were often called Counts of Troyes; those of Valois, Counts of Crépy; those of Artois, Counts of Arras; those of Poitou, Counts of Poitiers; and so with many others. In early times it was the fashion, for I consider it nothing more, for French comites to sign the christian name with the addition of comes only; this was then sufficiently distinctive. But that territorial designations existed is evident from the usage of chroniclers and an occasional mention in the body of charters (such as Ego Droco, comes Ambianensium—Dreux, Count of Amiens—in a charter before 1035: he signs it as Droco comes) and they were usually added in the signatures by the time of the conquest of England. As Earl Roger followed the more ancient custom, we must look to historians to discover his Earldom—not suppose that he was “an Earl, pure and simple” (i.e., apart from possessing any special Earldom), then an impossible personage, I believe, in England, as it was in France.

⁶ Ord. Vital., l. v, c. 13.

⁷ Her only brother Arnoul d. abt. 1048, after which her uncle Ivo, Bishop of Séz, held the Seigneurie de Bellême till his death in 1070.

⁹ Houfridus de Vetulis . . . uxorem duxit nomine Alberidem quam assumpsit prope forestam de Brothonia in loco qui nunc ex nomine ejus vocatur la Haie-Auberaie. (La Roque, preuves, p. 21.)

¹⁰ She had a brother Eudes, called l'Insensé, who was disinherited by his father abt. 1077, by the advice of the barons of France, because he was of weak understanding. He was ancestor, it is said, of the Seigneurs de St. Simon.

¹² Radulfus de Guader, Comes Northwici, Anglia perpetualliter exhereditatus est. Expulsus itaque cum uxore sua Britanniam repetiit. Ibi Guader et Monsfortis, optima castella, ejus ditioni subjacent, que liberi ejus hereditario jure usque hodie possident. Ipse autem post multos annos, tempore Urbani Pape, crucem Domini suscepit, et cum Rodberto secundo, Normannorum Duce, contra Turcos Hierusalem perrexit, et in via Dei poenitens et peregrinus cum uxore sua obiit. (Ord Vital., l. iv, c. 14.)

¹³ A 3, 4 and B 2 are placed here in accordance with the usual account, to which, however, I attach little importance. Mr. Bridgeman (Princes of South Wales, p. 15), has an excellent note. “It has been asserted by some that Nesta the dau. of Res ap Tudor, who was a woman of great beauty, was mistress of King Henry I, and mother of his eminent son Robert de Caen, Earl of Gloucester, but this is very questionable. As Robert de Caen obtained through his wife the lands of Robert fitz Hamon and his Welsh acquisitions, the Welsh wished to create for him a Welsh pedigree.” I add that this Nesta is known to have married firstly, Gerald fitz Walter, Constable of Pembroke, and secondly, Stephen, Constable of Cardigan. It is not to be supposed that Giraldus Cambrensis, her grandson, would have failed to mention his relationship to the great Earl Robert, if such had really existed. He does, however, in his Itinerary through Wales, tell us that Nesta was mistress of Henry I.

¹⁴ Ord. Vital., l. viii, c. 9; v, c. 13.

¹⁵ For a possible first marriage, and for further details on B 5, 6, 7, C 3, 4, see the Genealogist, N.S., vol. x, pp. 1—7. The statement that Earl Robert (C 3) was b. abt. 1104 is confirmed by the ancient Codex of Preaux, which says that his twin brother d. in Apr. 1166, in his 61st year.

¹⁶ He was created Earl of Gloucester some time between Apr.—May 1121 and the end of 1122. These limits are due to the investigations of Mr. J. H. Round. (Genealogist, N.S., vol. iv, 129—140; viii, 93.)

Palm Sunday, which points to the year 1118; but this epitaph must refer to Count William II, who is recorded to have died 6 Apr. 1023, the Eve of Palm Sunday (as it was in 1028 as well as in 1118), and to have been bur. in that Abbey.

1640.¹ Sometime before the year 1626 he married Katherine, daughter of John Pierson, of London.² He became a freeman of the Merchant Taylors' Company on the 15 Jan. 1620 by patrimony.³ It will be seen that his eldest brother William named him as executor of his will, which he proved in 1632, and in this capacity we find him disposing of some of the property in 1635.⁴ At this date he had a residence at Brentford. He entered his pedigree at the Herald's Visitation of Middlesex in 1634,⁵ and there can be little doubt that he died before 1648, probably of London of the other part. In consideration of £440 and 5s paid by Cross, the Exelbys sell to him "all that back part of the messuage or tenement in the tenure or occupation of John Prytherch, now in the tenure of the said John Crosse situate in Chancery lane consisting of a kytchen, three rooms below staires and a roome on the parlour and eight other chambers and two yards which doe lye together and abutt upon the forepart of the said messuage towards the East," &c Warrant against claims by or under William Exelby late of Northawe Herts gent deceased father of the said John and William Exelby also Miles Exelby late of Ixworth co Suffolk gent deceased. at Acton.¹ In 1634 his issue living were William, his son and heir, and two daughters, Jane and Alice, he had also a daughter named Katherine, who was buried at Sandridge in 1626.² Of the two daughters no further particulars can be given.

William Exelby, apparently the only son of this John, was living in 1632, when his uncle William devised to him the estate of Wixendens, and he was then under age. In 1653 he took up the freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company, to which he was entitled by patrimony,³ and in the year following there were certain dealings by him with the property in Hertfordshire left to him by his uncle;⁴ he is then described as of Spitalfields in the parish of Stepney—weaver, and it would seem that he and some of his relatives about that time embarked in that industry. This fact opens up an interesting field for inquiry, for persons of the name are found in this neighbourhood as prosperous members of the Weavers' Company continuously from this date until certainly as late as the year 1735.⁵ He was, no doubt, the person whose recognizance was taken on the 26 March 14 Chas. II. (1662) for the due appearance of Thomas Betts, he being then described as of Wentworth Street. (Middlesex County Record Soc., vol. 3.)

We return now to the remaining children of William Exelby. The fourth son was Miles, of him hereafter. Robert Exelby, the fifth son, was born 22 Jan. 1605-6.⁶ Under his father's will he inherited a portion of the property in Chancery Lane, his eldest brother William being charged to maintain him at school out of the property, and at the age of fifteen "to apprentice him to some honest man of a good trade in London." Immediately after attaining his majority, viz., in 1627, he commenced a suit in Chancery against his brother for a share of the estate alleged to be due to him.⁷ There are no records to ⁴ Indenture 1 Jan'y 1654 between William Exelbye of the hamlet of Spittlefields in the parish of Stepney co Middlesex weaver of the 1st part and Thomas Westwood citizen and weaver of London of the 2nd part in consideration of 10s Exelby sells to Westwood all that messuage and farm house in North Mymys co Herts late in the occupation of John Peake and now in William Howard. And all those lands &c now in the occupation of William Howard and also those lands in the parish of North Mims about 60 acres to hold to the said Thomas Westwood. Enrolled 30 Jan'y 1654. (Close Roll 1654, Pt. 57, No. 26.) Also Feet of Fines co Herts Mich 1657. Thomas Westwood plt and William Exelby and Anne his wife Defts of one messuage one garden one orchard 40 acres of land 15 acres of meadow 15 acres of pasture &c in North Mymms warranty against the heirs of Ann—William and Ann grant and receive £100.

It should here be noted that it is possible, although from the evidence extremely improbable, that the William who dealt with this property was not the son of John Exelby, but his cousin William, the son of Miles, to whom in the event of the death of his cousin without heirs male the property was to descend.

⁷ Bill dated 8 Oct 1627 [no answer attached] Robert Exelby one of the younger sons of William Exelby the elder late of North Mims gent deceased says "Whereas the said William your orators late father was seised of divers messuages lands tenements &c in the County of Herts and in and about London and elsewhere being of great yearly value and also possessed of divers goods chattels &c and Corn Cattle &c of very great value sufficient to pay all just debts and legacies with a great overplus be found to show that the matter went beyond this initial stage. He sold his property in 1629,¹ and he is clearly identical with "Robert Exelby gent of Acton Middlesex bachelor aged 36" for whose marriage at St. Mary Magdalene's, Old Fish Street, with "Elizabeth Freeman of Acton widow aged about 50 late wife of Henry Freeman dec^d," a licence was issued by the Bishop of London on 30 Sep. 1642. (Harl. Soc., vols. 25 and 26.)² and being so possessed having William Exelby his eldest son and heir. Your orator being 5th son and there being 4 other sons and two daughters then living who he intended to prefer with portions of his estate &c made his will and bequeathed to the said Robert a messuage in Chancery lane in the tenure of Wm Squibb let at £24 to hold to the said Robert &c for ever; and Robert being very young not exceeding 12 years of age William was to manage the same and pay Robert's school expenses and afterwards at the age of 15 to apprentice him &c And the father further gave to Alice and Ellen his two daughters then unmarried £500 each one half to be paid at marriage and one half at the age of 21, and should they die before such periods then the said sums to be divided between the sons—Robert's portion being 100 marks. And whereas the said Robert accomplished his full age on 22 Jan'y 1626 but William when requested to give him his due in the Chancery lane rent and the 100 marks refused saying it took the whole estate to pay the £500 &c. (Chancery B and A, Chas. I., EE 6, No. 40.)

² This is, perhaps, the most suitable place to give some particulars collected as to persons of the name who were connected with the Weavers' Company, for it is not improbable that this Robert was the father of the Robert Exelby referred to in the following extract from the Marriage Bonds in the Vicar General's Office (Index at Doctors' Commons, Bonds at Lambeth):—

"1662 Oct 8 when appeared Thomas Davies of Trinity Minories co Midd. weaver and alleged that Robert Exelby of St Mary's Whitechapel weaver aged about 22 and a bachelor intended to marry with Elizabeth Perkins of the same place aged about 21 years spinster with consent of parents. To be married in the parish of Trinity, Minories," where the marriage is recorded as having taken place the same day.

The following particulars are from the records of the Weavers' Company. The meaning of the numbers in brackets is not known:—

1695 (?) Robert Exelby (44). ditto.

" Thomas Exelby (12). ditto.

1727 Mr. Col. Thomas Excelbee. Upper Bail [i.e., Upper Bailiff or in other Companies—Master].

" John Excelbee (88).

Concerning this Thomas Exelby the following particulars can be given. His death occurred on the 1 May 1738 (Gent. Mag., vol. viii, 276), which event the London Daily Post and General Advertiser of Wednesday, 3 May, 1738, thus announces:—

"On Monday died at his house in Spitalfields Thomas Exelby esquire one of his Majesty's Justices of the peace for the County of Middlesex and Lieutenant Colonel of the 2nd Regiment of Trained bands for the Tower Hamlets of which Sir John Gonson knt is Colonel."

The sixth and youngest son of William Exelby was Peter, but little information can be given concerning him. He was living at the date of his father's death in 1618, and his share of the estate it will be seen comprised the property called "Wamber Hill," near St. Albans, with some houses in St. Albans, and a long lease of property near Welwyn. In 1631 he purchased property at Shenley, co. Herts,¹ and was living in 1632, when his brother William bequeathed to him a legacy of £15.

To return to Miles Exelby, the fourth son, to whom was left a portion of the property in Chancery Lane. It will be seen that his father by his will in 1617 provided for his maintenance "at the University." Shortly after his father's death he proceeded to Trinity College, Cambridge, obtained the B.A. degree in 1621, and M.A. in 1625. In the following year he became connected with the far western parish of St. Keverne, in Cornwall, being presented to that living by Elias [Elizeus] Hele Christopher Blackall and Lewis [Ludovic] Hele, Esqs. (doubtless Hele Trustees of some sort). From a book of first fruits in the Public Record Office, it appears that he paid the composition for first fruits in 1626 (13 Nov. 2 Chas. I.). He had taken up his residence in the parish before 1628, and was instituted to the living on 20 April

Read's Weekly Journal of the 6 May gives a somewhat similar announcement, with the additional information that he died "at his house in Tash Street." He was in 1718 a Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower Hamlets, and in 1723 a Commissioner of Land Tax for the same division. The following is an abstract of his will dated 1 May 1735 :—

I. Thomas Exelbee of the parish of Christ Spittlefields Co Midd. esquire &c. Commits his soul to God, body to the earth and debts to be paid, To Richard Pyke of Christ Church Spittlefields gent and Joseph Oswin of Masons Court Whitechapel Silk thrower Nine leasehold messuages in Rose lane and Wentworth Street and four messuages called Naggs head court all in the parish of Christ Church Spitalfields to hold the same on trust to pay out of the rents to my sister Elizabeth Smith an annuity of £10 a year for life and subject to this annuity to Mary Lafford wife of John Lafford of Mile end Old town parish of Stepney Weaver for her separate use, and after her death to her children Exelbee Lafford and Amelia Lafford then under age. Shares of either dying before 21 to Elizabeth Earl spinster. Also bequeaths to Elizabeth Earl two leasehold houses in Brick lane near the Watch house in the hamlet of Bethnal Green and also other messuages there and in Bacon St Bethnal Green and also 8 messuages with land in or near Keat Street on the E side thereof in the parish of Christ Spitalfields "one of which I dwell in," also 2 messuages in Dean and Flower Streets to her for life subject to an annuity of £10 to "my brother John Exelbee during his life." To Exelbee Lafford £100 when 21. To Pyke and Oswin ten guineas each. Residue to Elizabeth Earl and she sole executrix. Written on three sheets and signed Thomas Exelbee. Witnesses John Allen, Edward Goldstone and John Coverly.

This will was evidently unsatisfactory to the Testator's relatives, and it was disputed by John Exelbee the brother, Elizabeth Smith widow a sister, Robert Exelbee, William Exelbee, and Mary Pallet widow, sons, and daughter of a brother, and was proved in solemn form on the 22 Nov. 1738. Administration being granted to Elizabeth Shepperd, formerly Earl, wife of Robert Sheppard, letters of Administration having been granted in June to Richard Pike, pending the hearing of the suit now determined. (P.C.C. Brodripp 259.)

A license was issued 14 Oct. 1727 (Vicar General) "for the marriage at Stepney of John Lawford of Stepney 30 bachelor and Mary Earl of the same aged 16 spinster with consent of John Yeats of Stepney weaver her guardian—father and mother dead."

¹ Feet of Fines, co. Herts, Easter Term, 7 Chas. I., 1631. Between Peter Exelbye gent plt. and Philip Adams and Alice his wife defts of one messuage, one garden one orchard, seven acres of land and five acres of pasture &c in Shenley—consideration £60.

1629, and on the 12 May 6 Chas. I. (1630) again paid the first fruits, so that it would appear there had been some informality in the first instance.¹ In 1630-1 he and Anne, his wife, were parties to a fine in connection with the Chancery Lane property, probably he then realised his patrimony. We know that he had a son named William, who was born before Oct. 1632, being at that date included by his uncle William in the entail of the Wixendens estate, but of him no further information has been gathered.² The Vicar died in July 1641, and his wife in 1660. They left a numerous family, and their descendants can be traced by the aid of the Parish Register as resident in the parish down to the present time—a period of 250 years. The later portion of the pedigree has little in it of general interest, and is, therefore, here given in skeleton form only. It is, however, an instance of the way in which under favourable circumstances a pedigree can be compiled from a Parish Register.

William Exelby, of North Mimms (ob. 1618) also left three daughters. Mary, the eldest, married George Clarke, of Wootton, Beds. (who was second and younger son of John Clarke) and had issue. John Clarke, the eldest son, was living in 1632.³ Alice, the second, and Ellen Exelby, ¹ His predecessor, Richard Dunning, vicar, was buried 12 June 1626. According to the Composition Books, P.R.O., 1626, p. 102, he compounded 13 Nov., 2 Chas. I. for the first fruits of St Keverne vicarage valued at £18 . 11 . 4½ the King's tenth being 37/1½ his sureties were himself, Silvester Wildblood of the par of St Dunstan in the West and John Exelby of the par of St. Bride, London, Merchant Taylor—his sureties for the payment in the second instance being Robert Nunn of St Keverne gent and Stockdale Gearing of the par of St Dunstan in the West Merchant Taylor (Comp. Book). How his connection with this parish came about is still unascertained. His successor on the presentation of Sir Thomas Hele, Bart., was William Goldsmith, M.A. The writer was informed that some years ago a number of ancient deeds of interest to this family and relating, it is supposed, to land or to the tithes of the parish were discovered and offered to a representative of the family, and by him declined. It is not known what became of them.

² A suggestive fact may here be noted. Along the margin of the Parish Register and opposite the months of Sep. and Oct. 1627 the name "William Exelby" is written, possibly the father, the Vicar, made this note as a record of the date of the birth of his son, which probably occurred elsewhere, and before his removal to St. Keverne.

³ Chancery Proceedings. John Gobert of the City of Coventry esquire and Sir Thomas Barrington knt say that John Clarke deceased late of Lincolns Inn Co Middlesex esquire was seised according to the custom of the Manor of Sandridge of Copyhold lands in Sandridge viz a farm called Nashes &c and about 3 Feby 4 Jas (1607) had license from Sir John Jennings lord of the manor to set to farm the land &c to Edward Smith of Sandridge for 21 years. John Gobert being possessed of the same, by purchase, assigned to his son in law Sir Thomas Barrington knt : on 30 Nov 13 Jas (1615) Barrington paid to John Clarke £1800 who surrendered the lands to the uses of Gobert upon condition that if Clarke should pay to Gobert £1800 on 12 May 1618 the surrender should be void. Shortly after in 1615 John Clarke fell ill in the house at Sandridge of a "cold palsy" until about 11 July 14 Jas (1616) when he died and on his death Gobert entered and on behalf of himself and Barrington appointed Alice Clarke (late wife of John) and she gathered the corn and crops. Shortly after Alice being occasionally in London George Clarke brother to John Clarke and William Exelby father in law of George confederated together and wrongfully entered and keep possession and have sold a great quantity of corn &c and bricks and tiles and dispute Gobert's title. The defendants answer. George Clarke says John Clarke his brother was seized &c and being indebted to Edward Smith and John was largely indebted to him the said George the latter being possessed of freehold lands given to him by the Will of John Clarke deceased his father the residue of the land being given to John Clarke his eldest brother, George the third daughter, were both living in 1617, but as previously remarked, it may be inferred from the reference to them in the Chancery suit between their brothers, Robert and William, in 1627¹ that they were then dead, although this is by no means certain. No further information can, however, be given respecting them.

The following scattered notices are here given as the persons named may possibly be connected with this family :—

The "Public Advertizer" (London) 18 Oct. 1769, contains the following announcement :—

"On Sunday died at Camberwell, aged 71, Walter Exelbee, esquire, an eminent scarlet dyer in Southwark, worth £70,000."

There appears to be no record of his burial either at Camberwell or Southwark, and I have failed to discover any further trace of him, or of a grant either of probate or administration of his property.

Agreement of marriage made between this defendant and Mary daughter of Wm. Exelby. (Chancery B and A, Jas. I., G 11, 51.) In connection with this case George Clarke of Bishop Hatfield co Herts gent and William Exelby of North Mimms co Herts gent enter recognizances to the Master of the Rolls for £2000 (Close Roll, 15 Jas. I. (1617-8), Part 34, No. 152), but the result of the proceedings has not been discovered.

Pedigree of Edwards

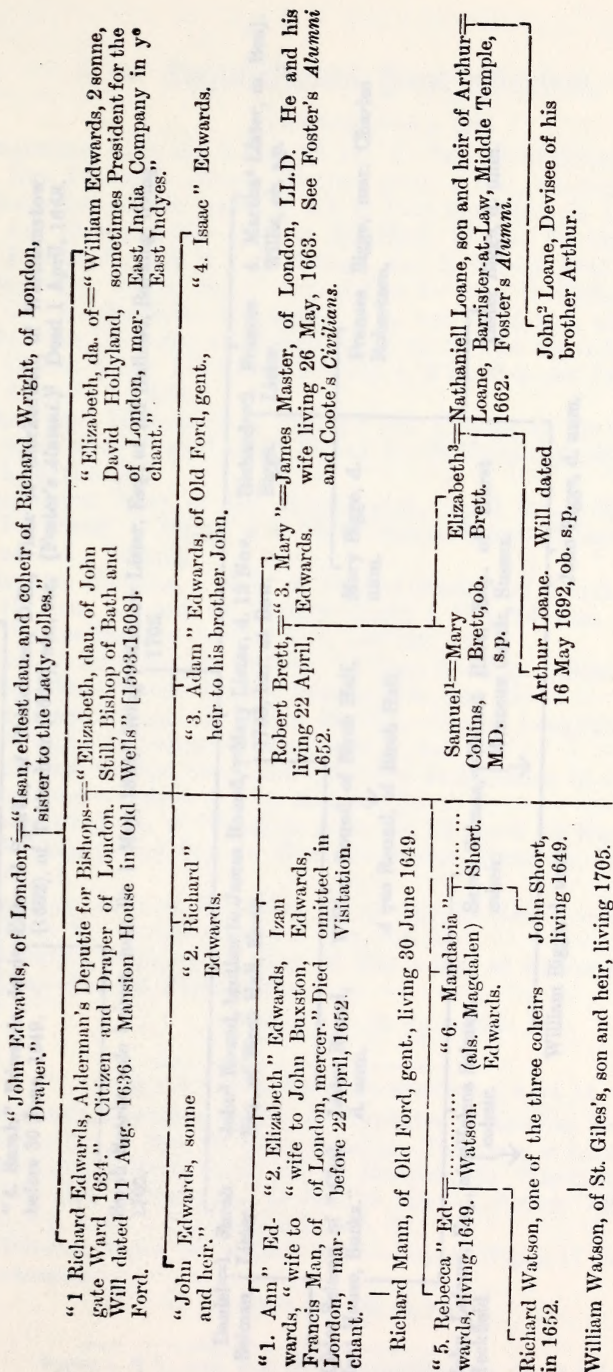

(LONDON VISITATION OF 1634).

The accompanying pedigree of the descendants of Richard Edwards, who entered his pedigree at the London Visitation of 1634, is based on certain evidences in our possession, especially on an indenture of 14 February, "1704" between Mathew Lister and Sarah, his wife, of Old Ford, in Stepney, and William Watson, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, each setting forth that, at that date, these persons were "the only Representatives and Heires at Law of the said Richard Edwards the father, and that all the rest of the abovenamed Children of the said Richard Edwards and their respective Issues are all dead." How this came to pass the pedigree will shew. The Visitation allows the arms "produced in a very old seale and an old escocheon and testified by an old patent."¹ The Old Ford property, purchased by Richard Edwards, descended to the Selmans and the Rounds, but the latter family parted with their share. "Lefevre Road," in Old Ford, preserves the name of the Selmans' heirs. The Indenture of 1704-5 is sealed with a seal bearing the coat of the Yorkshire Listers; and a portrait of Sir Mathew Lister is still preserved at Birch Hall.

Notices of Books.

WHERSTEAD, TERRITORIAL AND MANORIAL. By the Rev. F. Barham Zinke. Second Edition. London (Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent, and Co.): Ipswich (Read and Barrett). 8vo.

This is a second and enlarged edition of a work which was printed for private circulation in 1887, and which originally appeared in the columns of "The Suffolk Chronicle" in 1884. It is now issued to the public after the death of its author, who was Vicar of Wherstead from 1847 until his death in the present year. It has evidently been a labour of love, and we cordially congratulate Mr. Zinke's friends upon the success with which he accomplished his task. The work has the great merit of having avoided that rock upon which so many parochial histories split—dulness. Although the archæological details have received careful and accurate treatment, the book is not a mere wearisome record of facts, but the author has given us a vivid and interesting description of the parish and parishioners through many centuries. Sometimes the subjects treated of are a little beside the mark, but this we can easily forgive on account of Mr. Zinke's considerable merits as a raconteur. From a genealogist's point of view, however, the book has some omissions which greatly mar its value. There are no pedigrees of Wherstead families, no list of Monumental Inscriptions in the Church and Churchyard, and though there is a chapter entitled "Gleanings from the Registers," the gleanings are conspicuous by their absence. We note one entry which Mr. Zinke gives us. It is the baptism in 1673 of a daughter of John Ellis and Estofidelis his wife. The omission of more copious extracts from the registers is the more to be regretted as we are told that there are frequent entries of marriages and burials of Ipswich folk. We must not omit to mention that there is an interesting collection of Church Briefs from 1659 to 1679.

The chief land-owning families at Wherstead in the seventeenth century were the Goodings and the Cookes. Of the former family was Captain Richard Gooding, who, in 1645, was one of the members of the Suffolk Committee for nominating Presbyterian ministers. The Cookes, Mr. Zinke believes, belonged to the same stock as the celebrated Sir Edward Coke, who himself had a property in Wherstead called Bourn Hall. In later times the more important families seem to have been the Hunts, Brands, Sparrows, Vernons and Harlands.

Though we do not fully share the author's strong dislike to large estates and the accumulation of land in the hands of one family, we cannot but agree with him in deploring the disappearance of the substantial yeomen freeholders. Among these at Wherstead were the Frosts. Their homestead was built about 1620, and was converted into a Vicarage in 1802. Unfortunately it was found necessary to demolish this interesting old house when the present vicarage was erected thirteen years ago.

Mr. Zinke has carefully drawn up a list of his predecessors in the living. The early Vicars were all presented by the Prior and Convent of St. Peter at Ipswich; little can be recovered concerning them beyond their names. But from the institution of Samuel Samwaies in 1611 down to the present day, the author has given us a graphic account of the successive Vicars.

This Samuel Samwaies or Sames, as his name was sometimes spelt, signed in 1646 the petition to the House of Lords for the abolition of Episcopacy. Mr. Zincke suggests that one of his children may have emigrated to the United States and become ancestor of the Semmes family there. We must leave this to American genealogists to consider. Samwaies was succeeded by a puritan of a less moderate type, one John Burgess. During his tenure of the living some entries in the register were inserted, which were subsequently erased by a certain Oliver Thorne, whose Church principles appear to have been more orthodox. We quote the latter's explanatory note:

"What I have taken the liberty to blot out in this and the foregoing page was the interpolation of a couple of Fanaticks, who, notwithstanding they would not suffer their children to be baptised, yet (according to the practice of such a sort of persons) did insert their names here as baptised. Oliver Thorne, Curate."

Mr. Zincke's description of his immediate predecessor, George Capper, Vicar 1815-1847, is a capital character sketch, and helps to bring clearly before our minds the great change that the present half century has brought about in the popular ideal of what a clergyman should be.

The book is well illustrated, the portraits, which are reproductions by the Autotype Company, being especially good.

MEMORIALS OF THE PRICHARDS OF ALMELEY AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.

Compiled by Isabel Southall. Privately printed. Birmingham. Sm. 4to.

Miss Southall has produced a pleasantly written little volume giving the history of her ancestors, the Prichards of Almeley, in Herefordshire, and their descendants. The authoress makes no definite attempt to trace the pedigree beyond a certain Roger Prichard, who purchased the estate of Almeley Wotton in 1668. She throws out a hint, however, that this Roger may have been descended from the ancient family of Pichard which held lands at Almeley at an early period. To this we cannot subscribe, for though we admit the probability of much confusion between the names of Pichard and Prichard, the fact that Roger Prichard had resided, at all events for a time, at Llanfyllin in Montgomeryshire, previous to his purchase of the property at Almeley Wotton, points almost conclusively to his Welsh origin, in the absence, that is, of direct proof to the contrary. Roger Prichard was a member of "The Society of Friends," and the chief interest of the book centres in its description of the simple and upright lives of the homely Quakers, whose integrity of purpose and self-sacrificing zeal for what they believed to be the truth we warmly admire. The tabular pedigrees at the end of the volume might, with a little trouble, have been made more complete. In fact, the genealogical part of the work has not been very carefully worked up, and is sometimes a little confusing. Miss Southall has added a few somewhat scattered notes concerning several families allied to the Prichards, namely the Southalls, Eckleys, Westbrooks, Pembridges, Colliers, and some others. There is also a biographical account and portrait of James Cowles Prichard, M.D., F.R.S.

THE STORY OF EGIL SKALLAGRIMSSON. AN ICELANDIC FAMILY HISTORY OF THE NINTH AND TENTH CENTURIES. Translated by the Rev. W. C. Green. London (Elliot Stock). 8vo.

The life of Egil, the son of Skallagrim, as told by the Saga-writer, is certainly full of interest and is, we think, one of the finest of the Icelandic Sagas. The events chronicled cover a period of some two or three hundred years, but the interest of the Saga centres, of course, in the life of its hero who was born about 900 A.D., and lived for over eighty years. The scene of his adventures is not confined to Iceland but extends to Norway and even to England, and some insight is obtained into the contemporary history of these three countries. Apart from antiquarian and historical interest, the Saga abounds in dramatic incidents and has a charm in the peculiar beauty of the poems which Egil from time to time composes. The personality of this warrior-poet of huge stature is, in spite of acts which would now be considered savage, especially attractive. Great credit, if we may be allowed to say so, is due to the translator for the ability shown in his sympathetic reproduction in our language of some of the peculiarities of form and style of the original.

AVERY'S ANCESTRAL TABLETS. London (Elliot Stock). 8vo.

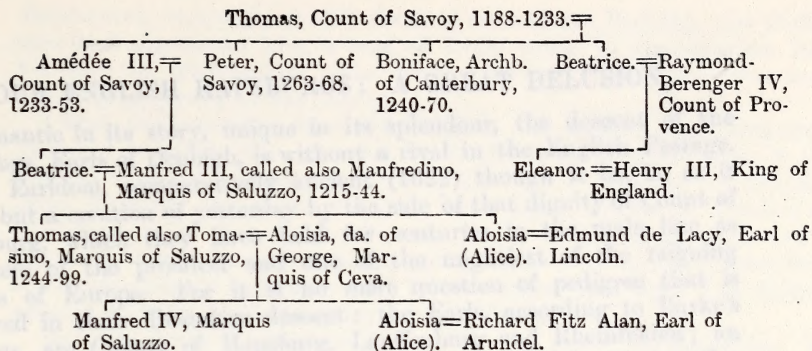

These diagrams are not the first of their kind. They differ from those arranged by Mr. Whitmore, issued sometime ago, and are perhaps a little more simple and more easily understood, but the spaces are not, as in the Whitmore tablets, large enough to contain the details required for pedigree work. Each sheet should be foolscap size to be really useful.

The Maine Genealogical Society (Portland, Maine, U.S.A.) is now publishing abstracts from the Probate Records of Lincoln County. The following is an extract from the notice issued with Part I. :—

When Massachusetts assumed jurisdiction over the territory now the State of Maine, she gave it the name of Yorkshshire, which it retained until 1760, when the counties of Cumberland and Lincoln were taken from it and separately incorporated. Lincoln county included nearly all the territory north and east of the Androscoggin river. Some of its territory was taken in 1789 to form Washington and Hancock counties; in 1799, Kennebec county; Waldo in 1827; Androscoggin and Sagadahoc in 1854 and Knox in 1860. The compilation will be done by Mr. William D. Patterson of Wiscasset, the wills verbatim and abstracts of other records sufficiently full for the genealogist. The price will be twenty-five cents a part or five parts for one dollar, payable in advance.

Notes and Queries.

SALUZZO.—The following pedigree completes and, where necessary, corrects the statements in the "Complete Peerage" (vol. i; p. 145, v, p. 90) concerning the ancestry of two daughters of the house of Saluzzo, married respectively to the Earls of Lincoln and Arundel. It also shews their relationship to Henry III.'s Queen.

CALVELEY PORTRAIT.—Being at Tolland, sometime since, the Rector, the Rev. H. G. Johnson, B.A., showed me a portrait painted on copper, which he said had been purchased by his aunt at a sale many years since, and was supposed, by one of the principal officials of the British Museum, to be that of the first Earl of Carhampton which had disappeared by some means from that establishment. Such briefly is the account I received. In the upper corner to the left hand and towards which the portrait faces are these arms with helmet and mantling, viz.: Arg. a fess gu. betw. three calves pass. sa. Crest—From a crest coronet or, a calves head and neck sa. The arms at once identify the portrait as being that of a Calveley, of the Lea, co. Chester. The style of the armour is too early for the first Earl of Carhampton, and would much better agree with the period of Sir George Calveley, of the Lea, who left coheirs, of whom Elizabeth married Thomas Cotton, Esq., and from which marriage descends the present Viscount Combermere. EURE.

BROWNE, LORD KILMAINE.—The Report of the Historical MSS. Commission on Lord Charlemonts MSS. (p. 336), contains an interesting letter from Sir John Browne (afterwards Lord Kilmaine) to his brother-in-law, Lord Charlemont (19 December, 1776), announcing his intention of taking up the Scottish baronetcy, which his family had disused, and to which he assigns the date of June 21, 1632. The letter is a very curious one, and besides the disuse of the baronetcy (which seems to have escaped notice), asserts that the first baronet was "great grandson to Lord Viscount Montague, of England." But he was, according to the pedigree in Burke, great grandson of a William Browne, of unrecorded origin.

PARISH REGISTER.—The "Essex Review" (ii, 223), states that among the Registers of Great Leighs Church, Essex, is a loose sheet of parchment headed—"Births. All Hallows, 1654," containing a list of births from 1653 to 1665, the parish to which it belongs has not been identified.

OUR ENGLISH HAPSBURGS: A GREAT DELUSION.

Romantic in its story, unique in its splendour, the descent of the Feildings, Earls of Denbigh, is without a rival in the English Peerage. Their Earldom, comparatively ancient (1622) though it be, is, as it were, but a creation of yesterday by the side of that dignity of Count of Hapsburg, which they have held for centuries in the male line as members of the proudest and one of the mightiest of the reigning houses of Europe. For it is no mere question of pedigree that is involved in their illustrious descent: the Earls, according to Burke's Peerage, are Counts of Hapsburg, Lauffenburg and Rheinfelden; an eagle of Austria bears their arms, which are surmounted by the cap of a Count of the Empire; and the name of Rudolph, which the heads of the house have borne now for two generations, keeps before our eyes a descent immortalised by the pen of Gibbon.

Nor is it only in Burke's Peerage that this descent is fully recognized.¹ In Dugdale's Warrickshire and in his Baronage it is accepted as an undoubted fact. It has been recognised, one may say, by the English Crown in the patent of creation for the Barony of St. Liz. (1664): it is said to have been always recognised by the Emperors of Austria themselves, and is at least, as I am credibly informed, admitted by the reigning sovereign. Indeed, I have seen it stated, on what ought to be good authority, that an Earl of Denbigh has been treated by the Imperial Ambassador at Rome "in all respects as a member of the Imperial House," and "as if he was one of the Grand Dukes."

There is no lack of documentary evidence in support of the family claims. In addition to the documents given by Dugdale, many others will be found in the elaborate history of the family, composed for its head in 1670 by the Rev. Nathaniel Wanley, and printed in what is perhaps the best known of our county histories, Nichols' Leicestershire.²

The story, as I have said, is somewhat romantic. Geoffrey, Count of Hapsburg, Laufenburg and Rheinfelden (d. 1271), head of the younger line of Hapsburg, is said to have been reduced to comparative poverty by his cousin Rudolph (afterwards the first Hapsburg Emperor) and to have sent his son and namesake Geoffrey to England, temp. Hen. III. This younger Geoffrey married Maud de Colville over here, took the name of Feilding ("Felden"), and had issue a son and heir Geoffrey, who, by his wife Agnes de Napton, was the direct ancestor of the Earls of Denbigh. Geoffrey, the father, returning to Germany, was refused his inheritance for having married Maud de Colville without his family's permission; and Geoffrey his son, likewise disinherited, eventually (1309) obtained from Count Rudolph, the uncle who had supplanted him, a sum of 7,000 marcs in compensation for his claim on Rheinfelden. The deeds relating to this transaction are carefully preserved by the family.

¹ So, in Mr. Shirley's well-known "Noble and Gentlemen of England" we read:—"The princely extraction of this noble family is well-known; its ancestor Galfridus, or Geoffrey, came into England in the twelfth year of the reign of Henry III, and received large possessions from that monarch. The name is derived from Rinfelden in Germany, where, and at Lauffenburg were the patrimonial possessions of the House of Hapsburg."

² Vol. 4, Part I, pp. 273-290. It is there stated that there was another similar history of the family executed "before the year 1658," which being sent to London by command of George II, for his inspection, "unfortunately perished by fire."

I have, for some time, been interested in this unique story, because, unless it is wholly false, it must be wholly true, in which case it is difficult to exaggerate the splendour of the claim it involves. A certain John Vincent, of whom we shall hear again, spoke of Feilding's "originall from that greate German family of Hapsburg, that hath produced so many emperors, kings, and great nobility, in many countries of Christendome,"¹ and the worthy Wanley urged their right "to claime alliance with the godds, meaning crowned kings."

But now comes the strange point that first raised my suspicion. I found that although the family had come here, we are told, under Henry III., their earliest assumption of the German dignities seems to have been under Charles II. (1675-1685).²

As to the German descent it first appears in print, so far as I can find, in Dugdale's Warwickshire (1656).³ In short, as was observed in the Quarterly Review,⁴ it was only after their lucky rise, through marriage with Buckingham's sister,⁵ that, "in due course, the family revealed a fact which they had hitherto kept to themselves, namely that they were not of English origin, but were descended, in the male line, from the mighty house of Hapsburg." Let us turn for proof of this assertion to four sources of information: (1) the family monuments, (2) a glass window put up by the family at their seat, (3) the family pedigrees, (4) the family patents.

On the family monuments and brasses, of which several are recorded, we find neither mention of the Hapsburg descent, nor use of the Hapsburg arms.⁶ To the family window of painted glass I attach considerable importance. It may be remembered that the famous imposture by which the Cambridgeshire Stewarts were derived from the Royal Stuarts of Scotland was supported by a similar glass window, which was made to confirm the descent. The Feilding window was put up (or at least completed), it would seem, about the close of the sixteenth century, for the first Lord Denbigh's parents are the last members of the family that it depicts. Erected ad majorem gloriam gentis, we might fairly expect it to make the most of their pedigree, especially at a period, in these matters, so unscrupulous. Yet it only begins with Geoffrey Feilding who married Agnes de Napton, an heiress, under Ed. II. or Ed. III. Coming now to our third source—

² This is the date of the third Earl, in whose time there was executed an engraving of the family seat, on which he was assigned the style of "Comes de Hapsburg, Dom's Loffenburg & Rinfelden in Germania, Baron of Newnham Padox & S^t Liz, Viscount Feilding & Earle of Denbigh in England," etc., etc. It is probably to this that Burke refers when he says that "William, third Earl of Denbigh, resumed the ancient denomination of HAPSBURG, which his descendants still use."

the pedigrees—we find the Visitation Pedigree of 1563¹ beginning in the same way with this Geoffrey and Agnes. The Visitation of 1619 raises a difficult question. The copy of this Visitation among the Harleian MSS. is in the actual handwriting of Sampson Leunard. Bluemantle, and bears his arms upon the cover, as we learn from the official catalogue. Now he was one of the deputies who actually took this Visitation for Camden. We may therefore claim this MS. as the very best authority. Humphrey Wanley, to whom, I believe, we owe the long note on it in the official catalogue, discusses its relation to the College copy (C. 7), which is less full and, in that sense, imperfect. This discussion is worth reading by all who are interested in the genesis and modus operandi of Visitations. Now the Feilding pedigree, which is duly found in Bluemantle's own copy,² is here carried back for two generations to a "John Feildinge," but an alternative descent is also entered as "out of Mr. Feilding's pedigree." This carries back the descent from Geoffrey and Agnes for nine generations (!), and is one of those familiar concoctions that nobody nowadays accepts. Its only value lies in its witness that the family were already trying to get beyond Geoffrey, though the glorious vision of Hapsburg had not yet burst upon their view.³

Turning next to our fourth source, a comparison of the family patents of creation leads us to the same conclusion. The original patent for the Barony (30 Dec. 1620) recites that "Willelmus Feilding miles genere et nomine clarus et illustris ex antiquâ Willingtoniorum quondam baronum hujus regni familiâ per multas baronum et equitum auratorum successiones oriundus est."⁴ This claim can scarcely be said to err on the side of modesty, for according even to Dugdale, the panegyrist of the family, the new peer's ancestor was William Willington, "a wealthy merchant of the staple," who bought a property at Bareheston, Warwickshire, 14 Sept. 23 Hen. VII, "depopulated the town" in the following year, and died in 1555. According to Dugdale, he was

"son to John Willington of Todnam in Gloucestershire, and he of William Willington of the same place, son of another John: descended, as 'tis probable, from that Ralph de Wylinton, who lived in E. I time, of which line I conceive that John de Wylinton and Ralph de Wylinton were, who in the times of King Edward 3 and Ric. 2 had successively summons to Parliament amongst the Barons of this Realm."⁵

So much for the long succession of Barons and equites aurati from whom, according to this veracious patent, Lord Feilding derived his descent. But even in this patent there is, we see, no trace of the Hapsburg claim. Nor is it found two years later, when the Earldom was created (1622). But when we come to the St. Liz patent of 1664, we read:—

² See the Harl. Soc. edition of the Warwickshire Visitation (1619).

³ The case of the "Carringtons" is very similar. In the Leicester Visitation of 1619, their pedigree began with Sir John Smith (1539), but on receiving a Peerage (1643) they took the title of Carrington, in consequence of "a traditional descent" from a Carrington who had "expatriated himself" and taken the name of Smith. (See G.E.C.'s Complete Peerage, ii, 167.)

Cum Basilius comes Denbigh a celeberrima et antiquissima prosapia comitum de Hapsburg in Germania, per Galfridum quondam comitem de Hapsburg oriundus, etc, etc.¹

Having thus made good my point that in England, this splendid descent was not revealed till about the middle of the seventeenth century, I shall now shew that on the German side the alleged descent has not been recognised by historical or antiquarian authorities, nor even by the House of Austria itself, as alleged, in the past.

I select for this purpose three typical authorities from the seventeenth, the eighteenth, and the nineteenth centuries. The first of these is Francis Guilliman, whose "Habsburgica," dedicated to the then Emperor Rudolf, was published in 1609. I have quoted from the revised edition of 1696. The title runs:—

Francisci Guillimanni Habsburgica
sive de antiqua et vera origine domus Austriæ

Ad Rudolfum II

Habsburgi—Austriacum Imperatorem semper Augustum (Editio nova, a plurimis mendis purgata).

Ratisbonæ . . . 1696.

The subject was taken up where Guilliman left it by a writer of unimpeachable, because official authority. I allude to the great work of Herrgot, the Imperial Historiographer, based on original documents throughout. It was executed for and dedicated to the Emperor Charles.

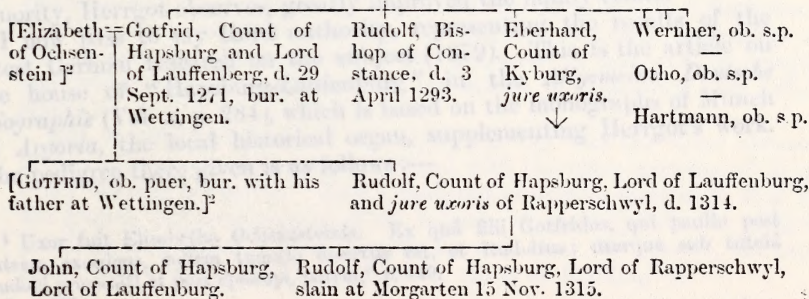

Genealogia Diplomatica Augustæ gentis Hapsburgicæ, quâ continentur vera gentis hujus exordia, antiquitates, propagationes, possessiones, et prærogativæ, chartis ac diplomatibus maxima parte ineditis asserta . . . opera et studio R. P. Marquardi Herrgot . . . sacræ Cesareæ Regiæque Catholiciæ Majestatis Consilarii et Historiographi . . . Viennæ . . . 1737.

[Dedication]

Augusto Cæsari Carolo Hapsburgensi D. Leopoldi F. patriæ patri optimo maximo.

Guilliman devotes his seventh book to the Counts of Hapsburg of the Laufenburg line, and, combining his work with that of Herrgot, the pedigree runs as follows:—

Rudolf ("the taciturn"), Count of Hapsburg.

In Guilliman only.

The scene of our story, it is needful to explain, is on the south or Swiss bank of the Rhine from Basle on the west to Constance on the east. Ascending the river eastwards from Basle, we first pass the town of Rheinfelden—of which more anon—then Säckingen, the site of an Abbey, with which the Hapsburgs were connected, and lastly Laufenburg, the “castle of the rapids,” the picturesque and ancestral home of our Counts.

Their line was founded by Rudolf, “the Taciturn” (d. 1249), from whose elder brother descended the Hapsburg Emperors of Austria. With Gotfrid, his son and heir, our story begins. This Gotfrid was Lord of Laufenburg, which he held of the Abbey of Säckingen. In one document he occurs as “Comes de Laufenburg” (1258); in all others as “dominus Lauffenburgi,” or Count of Hapsburg only. Guilliman assigns him Elizabeth Ochsenstein as a wife: Herrgot says the fact rests on Guilliman’s authority alone. By the latter he is assigned two sons, Gotfrid (the Feildings’ alleged ancestor), who, dying shortly after his father, was buried at Wettingen in the same grave, and Rudolf,—both of them left in ward to their uncle, Bishop Rudolf.¹ Herrgot ignores Gotfrid altogether (p. 236)—probably from his dying too young to be mentioned in any documents. That, in any case, he cannot long have survived his father is shewn by an important deed of 1274, printed by Herrgot,² from the archives of Wettingen,³ which runs: “per legitimum tutorem aut tutores Rudolfi domicelli nostri, filii videlicet bonæ memoriæ Comitis Goetfridi.”

Herrgot lays special stress on the fact that this Rudolf alone continued the line:—

“totam progeniem lineæ Lauffenburgo—Habsburgicæ, absque controversiâ, Rudolpho ejus [Gotfridi] filio, de quo hic agimus, esse adscribendam.”

Rudolf remained in ward till 1288,⁴ and we have accordingly a deed, of 5 June 1287, printed by Herrgot “ex Archivo Wettingensi,” in which the Bishop, his uncle and namesake, styles himself—and refers “prædicto R[udolfo] Comiti nostro nepoti.” This long minority, Herrgot observes, greatly improved the family estate.

R. dei gratia Constantiensis episcopus, tutor pupilli R[udolfi] Comitis de Hapsburg.

I now pass to my third authority, representing the results of the latest German research on the subject (1879). This is the article on the house of “Hapsburg-Laufenburg” in the Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie (Vol. x, p. 284), which is based on the monographs of Münch in Argovia, the local historical organ, supplementing Herrgot’s work. The pedigree there given is as follows:—

³ The great Abbey of Wettingen, the burying-place of the family, is situated on the line from Basle to Zurich, considerably south of the Rhine.

⁴ Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie.

⁵ DCXLII, p. 533.

Rudolf, the Taciturn, of Laufenburg,
d. 6 July 1249.

Gottfried, of Laufenburg,
d. 1271.

Rudolf, of Laufenburg (and afterwards of Rap.—Elizabeth, heiress of Rapperschwyl, perschwyl, jure uxoris), b. 15 July 1270, in widow of Ludwig von Homberg, ward to his uncles till 1288. mar. 1296.

It is here positively stated that Rudolf was the only son ("der name H[apsburg] L[aufenburg] blieb jetzt dem *einzig*en, am 15 July 1270 geborenen, Sohne Graf Gottfrieds I, Rudolf III.") The Feildings' alleged ancestor is wholly ignored: and Rheinfelden is not included in the possessions assigned to the house. The date of Rudolf's birth, which this article gives us, explains his long minority from 1271 to 1288. Had the original concoctor of the pedigree known of these dates, he would have hesitated to make Rudolf's brother come to England under Henry III (1216-72).

Now, bearing in mind the true pedigree, as given by the German authorities, let us see how the original concoctor of the Feildings' spurious pedigree set to work. He had to affiliate their undoubted ancestor and founder of their house, Geoffrey Feilding, husband of the Napton heiress, who must have lived under Edward II and Edward III. For this purpose he boldly pitched upon Gotfried,¹ the son of Count Gotfried, who died according to Guilliman, just after his father. Probably, as I have said, he was unaware that Gotfried was an infant at his father's death (1271) and that his brother, as we now know, was only born in 1270. Wanley had read, it is true, in Buccelinus:—"Gotfridus secundus obiit in juventute;" but he got over this difficulty by holding that this "juventus, in the gradations of the years of man, may be extended to the period of forty years"! This enabled him to assign to Gotfried a career of which, on the German side, there is no trace. Bringing him to England, in his father's lifetime, at some unspecified date in the reign of Henry III (1216—1272), he made him there marry Matilda de Colville and have children. Then, at a date equally unspecified, he made him return to Germany, to satisfy the authorities who say that he was buried at Wettingen. A difficulty faced him, of course, in the fact that in all the English documents the Christian name is "Galfrid is," and in all the German ones "Gotfridus." The two names might occasionally be confused, but such unanimity as this cannot be explained away. He got over it, however, by simply converting every "Gotfridus" of the House of Hapsburg into "Galfridus."

But the chief obstacle, of course, in his way was the utter absence of any evidence for his story, combined with the utter ignoring of it by every German authority. Now I shall not profess to state each step in the growth and development of the legend. I can only take the alleged proofs as they stand. First then, in an evil hour for himself, the concoctor endeavoured thus to explain the name of Feilding:—

"Memorandum quod Galfridus Comes Hapsburgicus propter oppressiones sibi illatas a Comite Rodolpho, qui postea electus erat Imperator, ad summam paupertatem redactus, unus ex filiis suis, nomine Galfridus militavit in Anglia sub Rege Henrico tertio. Et quia pater ejus Galfridus Comes habuit pretensiones ad certa dominia in Lauffenburg & Rinfelden, retinuit sibi nomen de felden, Anglice Feilding."

Dugdale, who printed this "Memorandum" in his History of Warwickshire,¹ declared the MS. to be "written about K. Edward 4 time," but, even if genuine, the style of the handwriting, it will be found, is of the time of Henry VIII. We shall see that this unlucky derivation has proved fatal to the whole imposture. In the meanwhile, we may note that the excellent Wanley was somewhat puzzled by the occurrence of a "Feilding" at Lutterworth (their abode) before the arrival of the mysterious German, the alleged founder of the family;² but he suggested that perhaps the exile adopted Feilding, as "by a double reflection the fittest surname for this family"!

Let me now enumerate the deeds and documents on which rests the alleged descent:—

- (A) Six German deeds, two of 1307, two of 1309, and two of 1365.³
- (B) Eleven English deeds (as I reckon them) of the fourteenth century.
- (C) Several English documents or memoranda (printed in Dugdale's Warwickshire and Nichols' Leicestershire).⁴

Taking these in order, I begin with the German deeds. The first point to strike the expert is a strange air of unreality, a sense of there being "something wrong"; the expressions are strange, the language unusual. The next point is that their concoctor has overdone his part: in his extreme anxiety to introduce the story of Count Geoffrey's settlement in England, in his eagerness to connect the name of Feilding, through Felden, with Rheinfelden, he has shown his hand too plainly and only raised our strong suspicions. The third point is that "Germania" is used throughout for Germany, whereas the right name, in deeds and documents of the time, is, of course, "Alemania." I may add that, as we might expect, "family" is rendered "familia"!

Let us, however, examine in detail the first two charters. Wanley describes them as being "jointly in one deed," but the first is dated at Säckingen "primo kalend Junii" (!) 1307, and the second at Rheinfelden "decimo kalend' Decembris," 1307. In the first of these documents, John "de Rotbery," as "procurator specialiter delegatus" for the Abbey of Säckingen, testifies that John "Steine," the "servus familiaris" of the exiled noble's son and heir, has come to claim on his behalf "omnia dominia, feoda, et servitia tam in comitatu de Rhynfelden quam in diversis aliis locis in Germania," and that the Abbess and Convent can only pray to God "et omni curie celestium animarum" (!)

"ut exaltent illum ad dignitates non indignas viro tam alti sanguinis, ut qui a longa serie comitum et principum de Hapsburg, tandem a primis Francorum regibus genus suum deducens, mereatur honorem et estimationem in illo glorioso regno Anglie, sicut justum et decorum esse videatur."

² Nichols, pp. 278-9.

³ All in Nichols (pp. 280, 281, 286).

⁴ Two in Dugdale (p. 86), the rest in Nichols.

This extract may serve as a sample of these ridiculous documents, of which the dog-Latin is at times exquisitely funny. But their concoctor might at least have avoided introducing into those of 1307 the clause "regnante domino Adolpho Imperatore," considering that the Emperor Adolph had died in 1298—nine years before!

The hand of the forger stands revealed.

After this it is useless to waste time over the deeds of 1309, of which the first has the seal, alas! "broken off from the label." This reminds us that the Abbess of Säckingen had, we are told, reasons of her own for not affixing her seal to the first of these deeds, so that her proctor used his own by her orders ("ex ordine suo"). So with the two deeds of 1365, of the first of which we read that "the bishop's seal was, by the motions of several journeys broken off, but exactly copied out before." The last of these documents has, indeed, the seal of "Sir George Hirschorn, knight," still "entire;" but this proves to be only a fancy rebus on his name, which anyone could invent. It is singular that an English deed (2 Ed. III) of considerable importance for the descent "had the seal of the eagle affixed to it, but by accident broke off" (p. 284). Another English deed (28 Ed. III) was "so defaced as not thought fit to be made use of amongst other evidences whose originals remain so clear and entire,"¹ especially since the seal, which had the impression of a lion rampant, in its passage from London into Warwickshire, was unfortunately thrown into the water with the sumpter-horse, wherein it was (as also by the motion of the horse) broken off and mouldered to nothing; the type of which seal was taken long before, and remains yet in the Earl of Denbigh's Book of Evidences." How provoking these seals were! There was a deed of 3 Ric. II which "had affixed to it the seal of an eagle," which is what we want, but—"by often removals broken off, though before entered into the Earl of Denbigh's Book of Evidences" (p. 285). How prescient it was to enter these seals, and how invaluable are the entries now!

But to return to the German deeds of "1365," which are respectively dated "tertio die mensis Martii" and "tertio Calend' Martii"—rather an awkward combination (p. 286). I must explain at the outset that though they are composed in the same queer Latin as the others, they ought to be in old German. Herrgot prints in his great work, some seventy charters for the period 1360—1390; they relate to the same parties as these two documents, the Duke of Austria, Bishop of Basle, Counts of Hapsburg, etc., etc., and, without one exception, they are all in old German. But doubtless old German was more than the forger could attempt. The story these deeds tell is really rather a clever one. They relate to "William Filding, Esq., of Lutterworth," whom they transform into "Willielmus de Hapsburg, natione Anglus vocatus autem in Angliâ Felden, ex antiquâ prosopiâ comitum et principum de Hapsburg in Germania oriundus." According to them, "post multas devastaciones ab Anglicis commissas in Alsatiâ et aliis partibus Germaniæ," this William "in illo exercitu² prefectus equitum," was taken prisoner, "fortiter dimicans," near the Rhine, by the Bishop of

² "in exercitu Anglorum," in the other deed

Basle's men. His alleged kinsman, Duke Leopold of Austria, heard that he was undergoing greater hardships "quam convenire poterit dignitate (sic) Germanicæ gentis, vel natalis ipsius Willielmi, qui ab antiquis comitibus de Hapsburg originem suam deducit." He intervened therefore to help him in his distress ("in tempore distressus sui"), and procure his liberation at the hands of the Bishop. Now, what, it may be asked, could an English army be doing at this time in Alsace? Well, a celebrated leader of the time, Enguerrand de Coucy, Earl of Bedford and Knight of the Garter, son-in-law of Edward III, maternal grandson of Duke Leopold of Austria, and son of the proudest Baron in Europe, raised an army to enforce his claims, through his mother, on Austria, in which was comprised a picked force of 6,000 Englishmen. Hence this army was known as the "English" bands, and the scene of its defeat between Basle and Lucerne is still known as "the English Barrow." Moreover, it actually did march to the banks of the Rhine, and—through Alsace—into Switzerland. But, alas, all this took place, not in 1365, but in 1375, and the ingenious forger has clearly confused it with the raid of Cervole's French freebooters in 1365! This is sad, for had he only made his document quite accurate, it would have gone far to support the Hapsburg claim.

Passing to the English deeds and documents, I select as the simplest test, their mention, among the family dignities, of Rheinfelden. The best known, probably, of these evidences is that letter of attorney of 1316 (9 Ed. II), in which Geoffrey Feilding (the real ancestor, as I term him) styles his grandfather "Comes de Hapsburg et Dominus in Laufenburg et Rinfelding in Germania." For Dugdale having selected it for insertion in his Warwickshire and his Baronage, it found its way into Collins' Peerage, etc., etc. The attempt to make the name of the place approximate to that of the family will, of course, be observed. The same form recurs in a deed assigned to Geoffrey, his alleged father (the one who came to England temp. Hen. III).¹ There are several other of these documents in which the name is found; and in two of them at least the style runs, not "dominus," but "Comes de Hapsburg, Laffenberg. & Rinfelden"—which is that now used by the family. If it can be shewn that the Hapsburgs of Laufenburg were neither Lords nor Counts of Rheinfelden, and did not so style themselves, these documents are, obviously, forgeries. I turn, therefore, to the German authorities for information on the subject.

In his chapter "de dominio et burggraviatu Rhinfeldensi,"² Herrgot, who elsewhere tersely says: "in nostris monumentis nullus occurrit Comes Rhinfeldensis," discusses the early history of Rheinfelden, and shows that the town, at an early period, belonged directly to the Emperor. An imperial charter of 1225 guaranteed this position, and promised that the town should not be severed from the imperial domain.³ Accordingly in June 1243 we find it administered by Ulrich de Liebenberg "Sacri Imperii Ministerialis et Burgravius in Rinfelden."⁴ So again we find the Emperor Rudolf granting liberties to "omnes nostros de Rinvelden (31 July 1276).¹ It would, therefore, he observes, be waste of time to discuss the supposition that the Lauffenburg Counts had any connection with Rheinfelden. And indeed in his vast collection of charters relating to the family, there is not one to be found in which they occur as Lords of it, or claim any rights over it. Guilliman had written no less positively :—

⁴ Ibid., p. 269.

De Hapsburgi Comitibus qui ad avitum præter Lauffenberg dominium nihil tituli addiderunt . . . Hapsburgi comitum nomen retinuerunt, neque ad id adjunxerunt aliud, quam ex Lauffenbergo Oppido rheni denominationem.

Lastly, the Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie (1879), enumerating the possessions of these Hapsburg Counts, wholly omits Rheinfelden, and gives Lauffenburg as their residence, till their marriage with the heiress of Rapperschwyl made them occasionally reside there also. This point is the more important because the second, third and fourth of the spurious German deeds are all dated from Rheinfelden, an obvious attempt to introduce the name which has merely increased the evidence against them.

But how, it may be asked, did the daring concoctor come to make Rheinfelden the keystone of his story? This raises the difficult question whether Rheinfelden was merely introduced to patch together a connection between Feilding and Hapsburg, or was itself the origin of the whole story by the tempting termination Rheinfelden. In either case he had clearly got hold of some foreign work which assigned Rheinfelden, in error, to the Lauffenburg Hapsburgs. Exactly such a work is found in the Basilikon of Elias Reusnerus, of which the first edition was published in 1592, and which is actually referred to throughout by Wanley.²

Now this writer gives us (p. 26) the following pedigree :—

² His general reference at the end is to "Henninges, Reusnerus, Albicius, Bucelinus, and all the German writers on this subject as well ancient as modern." (Nichols, 290) !

³ Rudolph, of course, was not Emperor till many years after the Count's death.

To show how wildly erroneous is this pedigree, I need only print its outline by the side of the true one :—

But, indeed, even Wanley tacitly rejects this erroneous pedigree, and points out that Reusnerus had confused Gotfrid [d. 1271], who fought against Berne, with his son. Yet it is to such untrustworthy writers that we are referred throughout, and when appeal is made to the Annales Murenses for confirmation,¹ we find they do not include Rheinfelden among the family possessions.

We may therefore safely reject every Feilding deed or document in which Rheinfelden occurs; and difficult—almost impossible—though it be to believe that all these evidences were forged to prove the pedigree, the facts leave us no alternative to this astounding conclusion.

I now pass from the pedigree to the arms.

Strenuous efforts were made by those who were responsible for the Hapsburg descent to connect the arms of Feilding with those of Hapsburg. The former are “Arg. on a fess Az. three lozenges Or,” the latter, “Or a lion rampant Gu.” (now “ducally crowned Az.”). The attempt to prove the user of the latter having virtually failed, another line was adopted. The arms of Austria—which are quite distinct from those of Hapsburg and are now borne, separate, by their side on the Emperor’s shield—were pressed into the service. These are Gu. a fess Arg. It is needful to remember that the Laufenburg Hapsburgs had nothing to do with Austria, and of course (as their seals prove), did not use its arms. Undaunted, however, the bold concoctor produced a document “Extract’ ex antiquis historicis et evidenciis comitum de Hapsburg,”² of which “the handwriting cannot be of lesser antiquity than the latter end of King Henry the Sixth, or the beginning of King Edward the Fourth of England.” This precious document narrates that:—

“Galfridus comes de Hapsburg filius Rodulphi comitis, cum ambiret in uxorem Margaretam viduam et heredem Austrie, in signum amorosi obsequii [!] saepe in hidis equestribus et in sigillis usitare solitus erat tramitem cum tribus cuneis ornatum, postpositis armis suis gentilitiis, scilicet leone.”

Then it goes on to say how he sent his son Geoffrey, “tunc exutum patrimonio in comitatu Rinfeldensi,” to England, temp. Hen. III. A variant (in English) of this document is quoted by Nichols (p. 251) “from a MS. written about the middle of the seventeenth century”—a significant date. Wanley follows it by some sapient remarks, with which should be compared those he makes on p. 286. As to the palm tree crest now used by the family, he opines (p. 275) that it may refer to a tournament “in the time of Frederick the Second,” at which their ancestor was “said to carry away the palme”!

I do not undertake to identify positively the original culprit (or culprits) in this colossal imposture. According, indeed to Dugdale, the belief is of great antiquity : but where the whole evidence is so tainted with forgery, one cannot be blamed for looking on every document with suspicion. I cannot at present find that the claim was advanced even by the first Earl of Denbigh ; but when we come to his son, the second Earl (1643—1675), we find him identified with it at every point. It was by his command that Nathaniel Wanley drew up the family history ; it was in his time that Dugdale was induced to publish the claim for the first time, in his Warwickshire and Baronage ; it was he who obtained the St. Liz Patent, in 1664, containing a formal recognition of the claim ;¹ it was he who put up, at his family seat, a window, introducing for the first time, as it seems, the palm tree crest ;² it was he who corresponded, we shall find, with Ashmole (1670) about the Hapsburg claim ; it was he (I am told) who subscribed to rebuilding the College of Arms, and thus secured the entry in the book of "benefactors" of his Hapsburg descent ; and it was he who employed John Vincent, that "needy, seedy" man, as I have heard him described, in connection with it. For we find an entry by Vincent, in Lord Denbigh's Book of Evidences, concerning a chimney-piece he had seen at Lutterworth in 1665, "having some relation to the renowned family of Hapsburg, from whence the right eminent family of Feildings thereabouts (most truly and clearly deriving their descent) doe very frequently use a lyon rampant crowned in their seales."³

Now this clue is worth following up, for John was the son of Augustin Vincent and inherited his heraldic collections. According to Noble,—

"John Vincent was . . . a good genealogist, herald, and antiquary ; but so ill an economist and so fond of liquour that he frequently pawned some of his father's literary labours to pay tavern expences."⁴

This character may be derived from a remark by Anthony à Wood, in a letter of 14 Oct., 1685, on the Sheldon MSS. (now among the treasures of the College of Arms⁵) :—

"John Vincent, the sometime owner of them had pawned several of them in alehouses before he died."⁶

A further statement of Anthony à Wood serves to clinch the connection :—

"You must know that John Vincent was a boone companion and a great company keeper with noblemen, especially with Basil Earl of Denbigh, and being always inquisitive and happy in a good manner might learn these things."⁷

¹ Ante, p. 195. This title represented his claim to descend from St. Liz, Earl of Northampton, through the Seytons (who were alleged to be "alias St. Liz."). As G.E.C. points out, under Denbigh, he held already a Barony of earlier date (1620), which renders strange his desire for this one. But besides gratifying his evident craving for ancient descent, it gave him (as a friend has pointed out to me) the opportunity of introducing the Hapsburg claim into the Patent.

² He also introduced an eagle crest. Dugdale asserts (Warwickshire i, 87) that they had used "for their crest sometime an Eagle, and at other a Palm Tree, though of later times alterned." But the old glass window and the Visitation Pedigrees shew only the true crest, a nuthatch with a fruited bough.

³ Nichols, 278. This makes an important addition to the memoir of Vincent by Nicholas, in which it is stated (p. 100) that "no trace has been found" of him after 1653.

Have we then in John Vincent the clever forger, who—as Meschini in Sant'Ilario forged the documents for Prince Montevarchi—supplied the too ambitious Earl with the evidences he required. We cannot say, as yet, for certain; but if Marlowe died in a tavern brawl, there is nothing, perhaps, derogatory in the thought that the Hapsburg evidences may have been concocted to pay for pots of ale.

Now that we have so closely identified the second Earl with the Hapsburg claim, we can approach the very remarkable letter he wrote to Ashmole, 26 June, 1670:—

“ . . . The other day, ransacking among my papers, I found three letters from Prince Thomas of Savoy; one of them I send you inclosed to be restored at our next meetings, wherein hee stiles me his cosen. This putt me in minde of the curious serche Duke Vittorio Amadeo, the eldest Prince of that family, made after my armes and descent both in my private travells and when I was the late Kings amb^t of glorious memory with his highnesse, who asking me which were the cristen names of my ancestors, I replied Jeffrey, John, Everard, Basill, and hee presently declared by my armes, sirname, and these christian names, I must descend from the howse of Hapsburg, with whom, espetially the Earles Geoffrey and Everard, his ancestors had bene engaged against in the warrs and att other times in treaties of correspondence, upon w^{ch} occasion, joynd to the dignity of a viscount in England, hee treated me ever in his letters with the stile of his couden, an honor not given to any, as I was told, under the degrec of a duke and peer of France. That Prince's letters I cannot yet finde, but I am certaine they are amongst my papers. Upon the same account Monsieur Bernegger of Strasburg, a great historian and antiquary of Germany, gave me those lights w^{ch} beefore were not so cleerely discovered to mee, nor indeed ware my studies and inclinations att that time taken upp with notions of this kinde. For that reason did the city of Basill treat me with great honor and respect in my private travells, and my brother-in-law, Duke Hamilton, beeing entered into Germany with a great army (1631) to second the King of Swedes attempts and designs, the Emperor, then Ferdinand the Second, att Ratisbone thought my honor a sufficient tye to separate me from all other interests but his owne if I would have accepted of those great advantageous offers he made me,” etc., etc.

It is not pleasant to be obliged to say what one thinks of this letter. In the first place, the names of the writer's ancestors² were Geoffrey (one), John (one), Everard (one), Basil (two) and William (five). It is odd that he should have omitted the chief one, which happens not to suit his theory. More serious, however, is the statement that the Prince “declared by my armes, sirname, and those christian names, I must descend from the house of Hapsburg.” The arms of Feilding are totally distinct, we have seen, from those of Hapsburg: the sirname of “Feilding” cannot possibly have suggested that of Hapsburg. As to the christian names, there was nothing in “Basil” to suggest the Hapsburgs, while Geoffrey, John, and Everard were common names enough. It is thus absolutely certain that the writer must here have been romancing. We must therefore doubt what he tells us about “the city of Basill” (the spelling suggests that he connected its name with his own); nor can we believe that the Emperor's offers were connected with his alleged Hapsburg descent, when we find it so completely ignored in Herrgot's great work. And, for my part, I doubt “Duke Vittorio,” in the seventeenth century, recollecting and taking so keen an interest in the Hapsburg cadets of the thirteenth. The letter is, throughout, that of a man trying to make out a case for the descent on which he has set his heart.

But when we come to "Monsieur Bernegger," I must confess that it looks to me as if we may have in him the ingenious antiquary who supplied (or gave the "local colour" for) what I term the "German" deeds. The name of "Stein," for instance, savours of a local knowledge which even the "inquisitive" Vincent is scarcely likely to have acquired. And the story told in the deeds of "1365" might well have occurred to a Strasburg man. Still, they are rather poor imitations, and "a great historian and antiquary" would, perhaps, have done better.

It will have been seen that two questions are raised by this paper. That the Hapsburg descent is an absurd fiction has been abundantly demonstrated, but its actual author and the date of its origin cannot be so surely decided. Everything points to Basil, second Earl of Denbigh (1643-1675); but if all the documents were concocted for him, it is difficult to see how Dugdale could speak of those known to him¹ as "authentique evidences" in the middle of the seventeenth century. Either his honesty or his critical power is thereby gravely impugned. If on the other hand some of these "evidences" were, as alleged, of earlier date, they could not have been concocted till the error about Rheinfelden found its way into England about the beginning of the seventeenth or end of the sixteenth century. Thus in no case should they have seemed in Dugdale's days "authentique." Perhaps the great Herald looked with partial eyes on documents produced by a Peer of the Realm, who was also a Warwickshire man.

As to the recognition, whatever it may be, that this claim has now obtained abroad, it is sufficiently explained by the natural belief that a descent recognised by the English Crown and certified by the most famous of all our officers of arms, could not be a sheer invention, and must therefore be true.² The evidence of the deeds proves the descent, and no one could suppose that a noble family would rely for its pedigree on spurious documents. The strange thing is that this pretended descent should be coveted by such a family as that of Feilding. For whether the antiquity of their Earldom be considered, or that of their position as county gentry, they must rank high among what in England is deemed ancienne noblesse. It is, however, only right to add that the family do but inherit this claim from their ancestors, and, though it has been, no doubt, accentuated by the introduction of the name Rudolph, they are wholly guiltless of its original concoction, and could scarcely, indeed, be expected to abandon it, till it was, as now, disproved.

¹ Wanley seems to have had access in 1670 to many more than Dugdale.

² In Vol. xxv. of "Johannes von Müller sammtlich Werke, Herausgegeben von Johann Georg Müller" (Tubingen, 1817), we find it recognised on Dugdale's authority only: "Wenn Dugdale's Briefe . . . wen diese Schriften ihre Richtigkeit haben."

ROGER, BISHOP OF SALISBURY.

In the earlier editions of Burke's Peerage and Baronetage, the Poores of Rushall, Barts., are said to descend from Roger, the famous Bishop of Salisbury, who occupied the See of Sarum from 1102 to 1139. Amongst the effigies in the Cathedral of Salisbury is one, by some considered to be that of Bishop Roger, by others to be that of his successor, Bishop Joceline, and this difference of opinion arises from the fact that the inscription on the monument describes the Bishop to whose memory it was erected, as being descended from "chiefs or dukes—from noble princes." This allusion to high descent has made some maintain the inscription must refer to Bishop Joceline, who was of the Bailleul or Baliol family, and not to Bishop Roger. If, however, Bishop Roger was really of the le Poher or le Poer family, the following will show that the inscription, in so far as the matter of descent is concerned, would be applicable to him. In the sixth century Brittany was divided into five principalities or countships, namely, La Domnonée, Le Vannes, Le Léon, La Cornouailles and Le Poher. The last continued to be ruled over by counts or princes, until the time of Alain "Barbe-torte," son of Mathuédoi II, Count of Le Poher. This Alain became Duke of Brittany about 936, when he united Le Poher to the Duchy. In the "Dictionnaire Historique et Géographique de la Province de Bretagne," by Ogée, enlarged by Marteville and Varen, under the article on Carhaix, page 147, mention is made of the country of Le Poher, of which the following is an extract—roughly translated—"This country (Le Poher) appears at one time to have formed part of the countship of Cornouailles, and to have been separated from it, and had its own lords, these lords were called counts or princes. This would indicate that they derived their origin from the Breton kings."

SEIZE QUARTIERS OF H.R.H. THE DUCHESS OF YORK, (Princess Victoria Mary of Teck) and of CLAUDINE RHÉDEY, COUNTESS OF HOHENSTEIN, her paternal Grandmother.

As a supplement to the second series of the Seize Quartiers of the Sovereigns of this realm and their Consorts, which (commencing with Henry VII, the first King of the house of Tudor, and concluding with the present Queen, the late Prince Consort, and the Prince and Princess of Wales) have already been given in The Genealogist (Vols. vi to ix, N.S.), the Seize Quartiers of H.R.H. the Duchess of York (Princess Victoria Mary of Teck) are here given, inasmuch as she, in the natural course of events, is likely to occupy a place among such Queen Consorts. Thanks are due, as on former occasions, to Edüard Von Fehrentheil und Gruppenberg, Major A.D.

To this is added the Seize Quartiers of the Duchess's paternal grandmother, Claudine Rhédey, Countess of Hohenstein, wife (tho' the marriage was a morganatic one) to Alexander, Duke of Wurtemberg, which addition has been made because the materials from which it is compiled are so little available, that it seems desirable to place on record the information therein contained. The following extract from a letter of Mr. Josef Klemme, Librarian to the Foreign Office at Vienna (dated 21 Nov. 1893 and addressed to the compiler of this notice), gives the best account thereof:—"I am able to forward you a full seize of Claudine Rhédey. Dr. T. B. Witting, one of our most clever genealogists in Vienna, composed them out of Hungarian works; they are scarcely known and you would do best to publish them in extenso.¹ It would also be right to name Dr. Witting as the author of these Seize. The names are written in the Hungarian orthography, which must be carefully observed, but for the Hungarian christening names (Mihály, Ládzló, &c.), the English (Michael, Ladislaus, &c.) is put within square brackets. As for the families therein mentioned they are all of good Hungarian gentry of Transylvania, though there is nothing particular to be said about them. Hungary was formerly divided into counties (comitates) which were governed by the ISPAN (Comes), the UNDER-ISPAN, etc. Those who filled these dignities were elected by the nobility of the county, always for some years. It was a self-government, and the families occupying these local dignities lived far from the Court, and scarcely cared for higher rank. The Empress Marie-Therese began to tame this independent Gentry, and proffered titles of COUNT and BARON, though the self-government of the counties remained till 1848. Most of the families were, and are now, fervent Protestants (of the confession of Calvin) though they were partisans of the Turkish dominion. One of the Rhédey family [Count Francis Rhédey] was Prince of Transylvania tho' only for a few months [Nov. 1657 to Jan. 1657/8],² the Sultan having dethroned Rákóczy György (George II) and ordered a new election, when the nobles chose Ferencz [Francis] Rhédey. He, who was of another branch of the Rhédey family from those of Kis Rhéde, tho' quite a fit man for the post, had to suffer from the sympathy felt by the nation towards the dethroned Prince. Accordingly, seeing that he could not maintain his position against Rákóczy, who again took the title of Prince, he resigned, and was succeeded by Akos [Achatius] Baresay, though Rákóczy persisted in his claim."

A third tabular pedigree is added, shewing how the Duchess of York is, thro' her mother (by descent from George III.), second cousin, once removed, to her husband, being also, thro' her father (by descent from George II.), his fifth cousin.

With respect to morganatic marriages, a very erroneous impression concerning their validity is prevalent in England. Mr. Klemme (alluded to above) writes as under (28 January 1894) concerning them: "Morganatic marriages are real marriages, duly consecrated, only they do not give the rank of the husband to the wife or children."

GENEALOGICAL NOTES ON THE FAMILY OF

Lee, Knt., Dr. of Laws,¹ Commissary of Pre. Court, by the Exor named. P.C.C. (Paul 320).

In the above will of Robert Phillips (who by the will of his great uncle, Robert Lee, assumed the surname and arms of Lee) we have traced the unusually complete testamentary history of the Binfield branch of the family during two centuries to its final and utter extinction.

Of the issue of John and Alice (Dalby) Lee, every male has been accounted for, unless we except John, the son of John Lee, Scrivner, of St. Pancras,² and I believe that, when a less narrow policy at Somerset House permits to historical enquirers access to the original documents filed there, it will be found, as has been before suggested,³ that this "John the son" is no other than "Joan the daughter," and an instance of the confusing clerical errors of the period.

Will of ELIZABETH, COUNTESS DOWAGER of LINDSEY of sound mind, dated 20 June 1719; estate in Bucks; to Mr. John Chapman £200; to servants Susan Maultby £100, Elizabeth Lusher £50, John Smyth £100, Hornman Gratlin £50 & Marg^t Riggall £10; to Geo: Moake of Swinsted, Lincoln, £50; son Hon. Charles Bertie Res Leg & Exor.; Wit. Han: Richardson, Edw^d Greathead & Edw: Ayscough; Pro. 26 Sept. 1719 by Exor. named in will.

P.C.C. (Browning 165).

The testatrix was the widow of Sir Francis Henry Lee, fourth Baronet, who was living in 1664, but deceased in 1674. Foster says that he died in 1667,¹ but, although careful search has been made, no trace of a will or grant of admon. has been found, and it seems probable that his estate was settled by Deed before his death. This is much to be regretted, as it forms the only break in the testamentary evidence of the enobled branch of the family for three centuries.

She was daughter of Thomas Pope, Earl of Downe, but does not appear to have inherited her father's estates, although he died without other issue.²

² New Peerage, by G. E. C., III, 165, note.

In view of the very serious clerical error in the above by which George Henry, the son and successor of the first Earl, is made to appear as Henry only, it has seemed best to give the entry in the Act Book verbatim. No doubt in the original papers it has been entered correctly.

1698—July 14.—Commission issued to Abigail Lee relict of FRANCIS HENRY LEE, late of Chelsea in Co. Middx., dec'd intestate to administer &c.

P.C.C. Act Book, fo. 138 b.

P.C.C. (Degg 144).

The above will is very interesting as entirely disproving the pedigree of the Lees of Pocklington, co. York, claiming descent from Francis Henry Lee¹ (husband of the Testator and younger brother of the first Earl of Lichfield), as the careful recitation of the minor children of the widow makes it impossible that the son "Francis Lee, bapt. 17 Nov. 1692,"² could have ever existed. It is most unfortunate that the author of the pedigree in question had evidently neglected to read this will, which he cites, as it would have prevented the introduction of an utterly untenable statement into the typographically beautiful History of Thame.

As a matter of fact the proofs of the actual descent of the Lees of Pocklington (from a somewhat humbler source than the Peerage), are now in the writer's possession, but, being in no possible way connected with the noble family in question, may be omitted as superfluous.

A CROSSBOW LICENCE, 1516.

The fac-simile issued with this number, and which is intended as a frontispiece to the present volume, is, as our readers will observe, of a licence to use the crossbow. It is indorsed in a contemporary hand-writing, "Thys was gottyn by the labyr of mestres fychewylzā [Fitzwilliam] of aldwerk in ye zeir of our lord god M.D.XVI."

As at the present time we have the gun licence, so in the past it was found necessary to regulate the use of such arms, the object being to protect the subject from murder, and danger arising from riots, &c. The following transcript of the document is given for those who may find some difficulty in reading the fac-simile, which is not quite so clear as the original:—

The Act of Parliament referred to was passed 6 Hen. VIII. and enacted that anyone using or keeping in his house any hand-gun or crossbow without the King's licence shall forfeit the same and ten pounds for every "shoot," unless he be worth 300 merks annual value. Other Statutes, 14-15 and 25 Hen. VIII., enacted that only persons having lands to the yearly value of £100 might use crossbows or hand-guns, that all former placards granted by the King should be void, and that a penalty of £10 could be inflicted for every offence against the Act. These last do not apparently necessitate a licence from the King himself, and there appears to be only one other Statute that did, viz., one passed 19 Hen. VIII., which allowed no one to use the crossbow without the King's licence, unless he be a lord, or have 200 merks' worth of lands. It is, therefore, clear that licences under the sign manual of the Sovereign, as this one is, are not likely to be often met with. The document in question is the property of John S. H. Fullerton, Esq., of Thrybergh, to whose kindness we are indebted for the loan of the original.

THE EARLDOM OF MEULAN.

It will be time enough for Mr. Round to reproach me for want of acquaintance with the Norman period when he is able to refute any of my propositions, the chief of which he silently ignores, and when he has acknowledged his own blunders and misrepresentations.

The proposition which he now vainly disputes is this—that Robert le Bossu was at first known as Earl of Meulan after his father's death, and therefore probably so in 1121. On this I have insisted from the beginning, and have never been "in a corner," as he is fond of repeating, for the simple reason that he can produce no evidence to the contrary; he has indeed admitted that Robert was not known as Earl of Leicester till long after he succeeded his father.¹

What, then, was Robert called in the meantime? I have produced some evidence on the subject, and it is not sufficient for him to carp at it; he must produce some evidence on his own side. He knows very well that Mr. Watson's paper does not help him, as it has no bearing upon the point in question.

Besides producing evidence, I carefully weighed all the probabilities, and, I think, showed them to be in favour of my contention. In reply to these he has not a single word to say, though the accuracy of his views was challenged.

We have his own admission that the Lincoln Survey was taken after the first Earl's death.¹ It describes certain fees as belonging to "the Earl of Meulan," then tenant of them, showing (1) that the title was still in use in England, and (2) that the title of Earl of Leicester was then unknown.

As to the Ramsey charters, Mr. Round relies merely on the local dates, which may or may not have been correctly transcribed; it is certainly curious that there should be five charters or writs for the same abbey, all dated at Burnham.² I prefer to rely on the fact that the Earl of Meulan is set down as a witness to two of those charters without any Christian name, just as in the Lincoln Survey, whereas the first Earl always designated himself by his name in attestations. And Roger of Wendover does call Robert as well as Waleran "Earl of Meulan," as he will see if he looks again.³

The question of age was given up by Mr. Round as being immaterial, and he repeats that he does not consider Robert to have been a boy in 1121, though he insists on William of Malmesbury having called him so only two years before, in a passage with which I was quite familiar. He leaves us to infer his admission that the young man was then known as Earl; but Earl of what, if not of Meulan? Robert had not yet taken up his residence at Leicester, and residence was the sole ground of title in those days.

The Abingdon account is not a mere "monkish story," but a record of legal proceedings, which we are only too glad to obtain for the purpose of checking the sometimes imaginative narratives of the chroniclers. In rejecting it Mr. Round blindly followed Mr. Eyton's lead, although someone—was it not himself?—once descanted on that learned antiquary's supposed want of "critical acumen."

I have shown that the term adolescentes, applied to the twin brothers, is commonly applicable to persons up to the age of thirty;⁴ and does he really mean to suggest that imberbes was inappropriate to young men of twenty-two? It is not likely that they would be remarkable for beards at that age. Their father was no doubt a grey-bearded man, old enough to have been their grandfather, and it is no wonder that they were looked upon as mere "boys" in comparison.

I had no wish to deny that Orderic Vital dates the royal guardianship after the death of the first Earl; but I did wish to suggest reasons for supposing that it had an earlier origin. Surely it must be presumed that Robert was brought up in the royal foundation at Abingdon, and that he there acquired the learning which he exhibited before the Cardinals as early as 1119. Nor did I state that Orderic calls Robert an Earl in 1118; what I wrote was, that the chronicler gave that title to Waleran, and inferentially his brother must have then enjoyed the same rank. His words are:—

² Three of them are in the Cartulary, I. 245 bis, 249; and the same three with two others appear in the Chronicle of Ramsey, pp. 227, 228, 229, 231, 283.

³ I have some recollection of seeing the brothers jointly described as "Comites de Mellento," but cannot now find the passage.

⁴ Vol. viii, p. 208.

A.D. 1118. Rodbertus [de Novo Burgo] . . . contra Gualerannum, comite de Mellento, filium Rodberti comitis, . . . calumnias faciebat, sed virtute regia consobrinum suum protegente, conciocinari ad voluntatem suam non poterat.

The chronicler was evidently unaware of the supposed period during which, according to Mr. Round, the brothers would not be known as Earls.¹

It will now, I think, be seen that his half-dozen final allegations are either inaccurate or irrelevant; and I claim that my proposition holds the entire field. I have, however, no desire to "bluster," much less to follow a bad example of "miscellaneous" detraction.

R. E. G. KIRK.

THE EARLDOMS OF DOUGLAS AND MAR.

Mr. Lindsay's article on this subject (ante pp. 129-131), calls for a brief reply. My own article, to which he refers, closed with these words:—

"Let it not be said that I 'do not disprove' the Mar descent. I have not claimed to do so. What I have done is to expose laxity and confusion. Therefore, if my remarks are replied to, let me beg my readers—speaking from experience—to refer to what I have actually written before forming their conclusion" (ix, 137).

As I anticipated, warned by experience, Mr. Lindsay urges that I have not disproved the descent of the Earldom of Mar. He does not, and cannot, deny the "laxity and confusion" in the evidence tendered before the Committee and exposed in detail by me (ix, 132-137; x, 65-70).

It is not the case that "Mr. Burnett was speaking of the entries of names and not of references" and "was giving evidence as to the use of a style or designation" (ante p. 129) as alleged by Mr. Lindsay. He stated in evidence that "the only mention in the Rolls of Margaret" was where she is styled "comitissa de Douglas et Mar," whereas I proved that she is elsewhere entered as "comitissa de Douglas" only.² So too with Isabella, I proved (ante p. 67) that Mr. Burnett's evidence as to "mention of her in the Exchequer Rolls" was directly contrary to fact. I am obliged to add that, in both cases, this false evidence was favourable to the cause Mr. Lindsay and he were supporting. I do not say that it turned the scale; but I do say (and I have proved it) that the evidence was contrary to fact. If, as Mr. Lindsay contends, the critical point "was conclusively proved by other evidence," why were the Exchequer Rolls put in evidence at all? If, on the other hand, their evidence was needed, that evidence breaks down in the light of my disclosures.

Notices of Books.

THE GENEALOGIST'S GUIDE. By George W. Marshall, LL.D., Rouge Croix, Pursuivant of Arms. Privately printed. 8vo.

We are greeted on opening this bulky volume with the following sage advice, namely, to read the Preface before consulting the book. With most reviewers it is probably the only part they do consult, but we propose to go a little more thoroughly into a work which deserves more than a passing notice. Dr. Marshall begins by modestly remarking that the "Genealogist's Guide" has been accepted as a useful book of reference—he might, without fear of criticism, have said more than this. The plan of action appears the same as that pursued in former editions, any descent of three generations in the male line being considered of sufficient importance to warrant a reference, and this is all that the most captious critic could expect. Reprints—or more correctly speaking "pulls"—are wisely excluded, the title of the work in which the pedigree or genealogical notice originally appeared alone being given. The "best or most easily accessible edition" of such works as county histories are referred to, the others being ignored. Several books are noted in the Preface which have doubtless been of great service to the learned compiler, and of one of them—a recent publication by Mr. Gatfield—Dr. Marshall quaintly remarks "that by including in his list such works as 'the Pedigree of the Devil' . . . it will be obvious that his researches into genealogical literature take a much deeper range than mine." It is only necessary to point out in order to show how much has been added since the last edition was issued, that this volume contains over two hundred more pages than its predecessor, eighty-two of these, however, represent a very important addition which will be gladly welcomed by all interested in family research. We refer to the "List of Parish Registers, etc.," at the end of the volume. This is an enlarged reprint of the list privately issued in 1891, and contains references to printed Parish Registers, and those in MS. to be found in public collections. Among the latter are the well-known MSS. of the late Colonel Chester, about which Dr. Marshall has something to tell us. The Colonel appears to have formed his collection partly by copying wholesale from printed books, and "again transferring to his volumes the labours of others whose MSS. he had borrowed." The result "was eminently satisfactory"! but whenever "this form of piracy," as it is very rightly called, has been detected, Dr. Marshall has given a reference to the printed book only. This volume, as we have indicated above, stands out among all the books of reference on genealogical subjects, and is, we think, deserving of the first place, yet there are one or two blemishes which obtrude themselves on our notice. In looking for any reference to a pedigree the inquirer will have to turn to two different parts of this "Guide," owing to their being a supplement containing a large number of references that should have been worked into the body of the volume. There are, too, a fairly large number of references, specially to early genealogy, which are conspicuous by their absence. Before closing this notice we must express our admiration at the untiring energy of its compiler, for no sooner has he finished this edition but he begins to talk of the next. Whenever that appears we may expect a still further addition in the form of an Index of Books relating to Wills, Lists of Alumni, etc., which will be most welcome, and will, we hope, fulfil Dr. Marshall's desire by making his work not only a guide to printed pedigrees, but "a 'Genealogist's Guide' in the fullest sense of the term."

FRENCHES OF SCOTLAND. By A. D. Weld French. Boston (Privately printed). Svo.

As the author of the "Index Armorial" Mr. Weld French is already well-known as an authority on the name of French with its numerous variations. In this work he deals with the surnames of Francus, Franceis, and French in Scotland, and has, as he intimates in the Preface, obtained his evidence from the records in the Register House in Edinburgh. The volume is divided into two parts, the first being a collection of notes on the name, the second is devoted entirely to a history of the lairds of Thornydykes. As an example of the variation in the spelling of the surname we notice in the short account of the Frenchs of Linlithgow, one of whom was the second Master Mason of Scotland in 1535, that it occurs as France, Franche, Frans, and Frensch. The earliest instances of the appearance of the surname in Scotland are to be found in monastic records, and are, of course, chiefly in a Latinized form, such as Francus, Franciscus, and Francigena, as with other names in ancient charters. There is so much valuable and hitherto unpublished information in the volume that it is a great pity an index has not been given, especially to the history of the Thornydykes' family. The portion of the book relating to that family will undoubtedly be found the most useful and interesting to the genealogist, and from the evidences adduced it is clear how trustworthy all Mr. Weld French's work is likely to prove.

BYGONE PENRITH: A POPULAR ARRANGEMENT OF THE PENRITH PARISH REGISTERS. Transcribed and arranged by George Watson. Part I, 1556 to 1601. Penrith (J. Atkinson Sweeten). Svo.

Under a title which would rather have led us to expect an archæological disquisition on the history of Penrith, in Cumberland, Mr. Watson has issued Part I. of his arrangement of the Parish Registers of that town. The entries relating to each name are collected together and alphabetically arranged, which will certainly save some trouble to the searcher, though we confess that we should have preferred an exact transcript, coupled with a satisfactory index. The work has, however, been capably performed, and we shall give a cordial welcome to Part II. In the Introduction we notice some interesting remarks on the Great Plague, which visited Penrith at the close of the sixteenth century, and in the Register itself occurs this singular entry, "1566 Jul. 11 Was Richard Lucas married."

WEST IRISH FOLK-TALES AND ROMANCES. Collected and translated by William Larminie. London (Elliott Stock). Svo.

The Camden Library gives every indication of becoming a very valuable series. With the "Antiquities and Curiosities of the Exchequer" and "Sculptured Signs of Old London" we have already dealt. The present volume is a collection of Irish Folk-Tales, translated from the Gaelic tongue, and contains nearly a score of complete legends. The study of folk-lore has found so many new disciples in recent years that this important addition to the fast increasing number of works on the subject, must appeal to a very wide circle of readers.

DORSET RECORDS. Edited by Edward Alexander Fry and George S. Fry. London (Charles J. Clark). 8vo.

We have received Part I. of this new publication which is to be issued quarterly at a subscription of 10s. 6d. per annum. It contains forty-eight pages, divided into three portions, each with separate pagination. The first is devoted to a Calendar of Wills in the Consistory Court at Blandford, 1681-1792; the second to the Parish Registers of Long Burton; and the third to Inquisitiones post mortem relating to Dorsetshire. The object is to "give to Dorset what the many Record Societies are giving to other counties," and as the Calendars, etc., which the Editors propose to print will come from the Public Record Office, Somerset House, and elsewhere, this publication will appeal to genealogists in general as much as to those only interested in their own county. This being the case, we do not consider it a wise move on the part of the Editors to start off with a Calendar which is now being issued in the "Index Library," and which consequently cannot interest the subscribers to the "British Record Society."

THE POET OF POETS. Edited by Alexander B. Grosart. London (Elliott Stock). 16mo.

In selecting the "Love Verse" as the most beautiful of Edmund Spenser's minor poems, Mr. Grosart has displayed the good taste that has marked the previous volumes of the Elizabethan Library, which have appeared under his editorship. His reason for this selection is given in the introduction, in which he remarks that the "Love Verse . . . shows the 'Poet of Poets' at his highest and finest and most distinctive in almost every characteristic of his genius." The text is modern, except where it is absolutely necessary to retain the original for fear of breaking the rhythm.

Notes and Queries.

FAMILY OF QUATREMAINE.—In the Rev. G. F. Lee's "History of the Church of Thame" he gives a pedigree beginning with Herbert Quatremaïne, of Ascot and North Weston (co. Oxford), dead 1201.

1. Is this the earliest known occurrence of the name in England, or has subsequent research disclosed particulars of any predecessors nearer the time of the Norman Conquest?

2. Are there any other pedigrees of this family showing the connection in the male line of descent with the Quatremaines formerly owners of Shirburn Castle, Oxon, after the death of Richard Quatremaine in 1460, when the Rycot branch terminated?

3. Is there any pedigree or other authority showing the connection between the branch which ended in Richard Quatremaine aforesaid and the family of which "Jerome Quatremaine, gentleman," was a member—referred to in "The Genealogist," Vol. v, pp. 127 and 296—together with the subsequent descent of the last named family?

ARGYLL, ARCHIBALD, 1ST DUKE OF.—The date of his marriage is not given in G.E.C.'s "Complete Peerage," but is proved by a letter of Dr. G. Hickes' to Dr. Patrick (13th Report Historical MSS. II, 47):—"Last Tuesday [March 12, 1677/8] I married my Lady Elizabeth [Tollemache] to my lord Lorne, eldest son to the Earl of Argyle by the book of Common Prayer. He is as virtuous and accomplished a person as ever I saw. He is a great lover of our Church," etc., etc.

LISBURN, ADAM, LORD.—His death is assigned to "1690" in the "Complete Peerage" of G.E.C. But in Lord Fingall's MSS. (10th Report Historical MSS., V, 161) we read:—"The lord Loftus of Lisburn was killed by a cannon-ball on the 15 of Sept. [1691] as he was coming out of his tent."

J. H. ROUND.

CHESELDYNE FAMILY.—Among the papers of the late Wm. Francis Creayar I find the following memorandum which refers to "The Genealogist," New Series (Vol. I, p. 138, Vol. IV, p. 173):—"Kenelm Cheseldyne, of Uppingham, of an ancient family in the county of Rutland, died in 1596, leaving eleven sons and three daughters. His eldest son, Edward, held the Manor of Braunston, in the county of Rutland, and died in 1642, a monument being erected to his memory in the church. He married Bridget, daughter of Anthony Faulkner, of Uppingham, by whom he had five children, viz., Kenelm, Anthony, Lion, Everard, and Bridget. An ancient parchment pedigree with the arms of the Cheseldynes, and the families into which they married, remains in the old house at Braunston Manor, though it appears from an inquiry that the Cheseldyne family is now extinct in Rutlandshire. No doubt, however, the Kenelm Cheseldyne, first of Matapong, in St. Mary's County, Maryland, U.S.A., was a descendant of this family." What the nature or object of the inquiry was I do not know. I desire to state, however, that Kenelem Cheseldyne settled in the Province of Maryland prior to 1670. His will, proved in 1708, mentions a son, Kenelm, and daughters Mary, Susanna, and Dryden. His wife was one of the five daughters of Thos. Gerard, of Westmorland County, Virginia, U.S.A., formerly of Newhall, near Bromley, in Lancashire, England. His third daughter Dryden, married first Henry Peregrine Jowles, and about eight years after married John Forbes, my direct ancestor, he being my great-great-grandfather. This John Forbes seems to have been a nephew of George Forbes, whose will was proved in 1739, and who married Mary Cheseldyne, a widow, she having previously married James Hay. George Forbes left property to brothers and sisters in Scotland. I should be deeply grateful for any information regarding either family.

BRIERCLIFFE.—Can any one tell me what were the arms and crest of John Briercliffe, of Briercliffe, a family now extinct. I think it was in Lancashire John Briercliffe lived. Nothing more is known than the above.
